

Contents

1	Introduction: The Parasitic Syndrome in Higher Plants	1
	Henning S. Heide-Jørgensen
1.1	Parasitism in Plants	1
1.2	Hemi- and Holoparasitism	3
1.3	The Haustorium	4
1.4	Dispersal and Germination Strategies	6
1.5	Host Range	7
1.6	Geographical Distribution	9
1.7	The Parasitic Plant Families	9
1.8	Parasite Look-Alikes	14
	References	14
 Part I The Orobanchaceae and Their Parasitic Mechanisms
2	The Haustorium and the Life Cycles of Parasitic Orobanchaceae	21
	Daniel M. Joel
2.1	How Do We Define the Haustorium in the Orobanchaceae?	21
2.2	Life Cycles of Facultative and Obligate Orobanchaceae	22
	References	23
3	Functional Structure of the Mature Haustorium	25
	Daniel M. Joel
3.1	Introduction	25
3.2	Haustorium Diversity	26
3.3	Lateral and Terminal Haustoria	26
3.4	Morphological Features of Terminal Haustoria	27
3.5	Roots of Hemiparasites	30
3.6	Morphological Features of Lateral Haustoria	30
3.7	The Anatomical Complexity of Haustoria	32
3.8	Tissue Organization Within the Mature Haustorium	35

3.9	The Conductive System	36
3.10	Developmental Aspects of the Vascular System	42
3.11	The Mature Endophyte	43
3.12	The Haustorial Neck	46
3.13	The Base of Lateral Haustoria	50
3.14	The Base of Terminal Haustoria	53
3.15	Exceptional Haustoria	54
3.16	Are Haustoria Homologous to Roots?	54
3.17	Concluding Remarks	55
	References	56
4	Haustorium Initiation and Early Development	61
	Pradeepa C.G. Bandaranayake and John I. Yoder
4.1	Introduction	61
4.2	Early Haustorium Development	62
4.3	Haustorium Initiation Factors	64
4.4	Haustorium Signal Transduction	67
4.5	Evolutionary Origins	69
4.6	Conclusions	70
	References	71
5	Haustorium Invasion into Host Tissues	75
	Alejandro Pérez-de-Luque
5.1	Introduction	75
5.2	Preparing for Penetration	76
5.3	Penetration	77
5.4	Duration of Penetration	81
5.5	Avoiding Defences: Tricks of War	82
5.6	Conclusions	83
	References	84
6	The Physiology of the Established Parasite–Host Association	87
	James H. Westwood
6.1	General Physiological Considerations	87
6.2	Nutrient Acquisition and Transport	92
6.3	Direction of Movement	103
6.4	Hormone Interactions	104
6.5	Macromolecules	106
6.6	Conclusions	109
	References	110
7	Host Reaction to Attack by Root Parasitic Plants	115
	Michael P. Timko and Julie D. Scholes
7.1	Introduction	115
7.2	General Mechanisms of Host Resistance	117
7.3	Histological Characteristics of the Host Resistance Responses	118

7.4	Genetic Basis of Resistance	123
7.5	Cell Signalling and Gene Expression in Host Defence Responses	128
7.6	Conclusions and Perspective	132
	References	134
8	Seed Production and Dispersal in the Orobanchaceae	143
	Daniel M. Joel
	References	145
9	The Seed and the Seedling	147
	Daniel M. Joel and Hilla Bar
9.1	Surface Structure	147
9.2	Anatomy	149
9.3	Water Absorption	156
9.4	Site of Signal Perception	157
9.5	Nutrient Transfer During Germination	159
9.6	The Seedling	160
9.7	Concluding Remarks	163
	References	163
10	Induction of Germination	167
	Koichi Yoneyama, Carolien Ruyter-Spira, and Harro Bouwmeester
10.1	Introduction	167
10.2	Strigolactones	169
10.3	Non-strigolactone Germination Stimulants	179
10.4	Can Germination Be a Target in the Control of Parasitic Weeds?	182
10.5	Concluding Remarks	186
	References	186
11	Germination Ecophysiology	195
	Alistair J. Murdoch and Ermias Kebeab
11.1	Introduction	195
11.2	Seed Survival in Dry Storage	196
11.3	Seed Survival in Moist Storage	198
11.4	Dormancy and Quiescence	200
11.5	From Relief of Dormancy to the Initiation of Germination	207
11.6	Germination	208
11.7	Conclusion	214
	References	214
12	Are Karrikin Signaling Mechanisms Relevant to Strigolactone Perception?	221
	David C. Nelson
12.1	Introduction	221
12.2	Karrikins, Germination Stimulants Found in Smoke	221

12.3	Regulation of Plant Development by Karrikins and Strigolactones	222
12.4	Karrikin and Strigolactone Responses Are MAX2-Dependent	223
12.5	KAI2 and D14 Are Required for Specific Responses to Karrikins and Strigolactones	224
12.6	Common Elements of Karrikin, Strigolactone, and Gibberellin Signaling	225
12.7	D14/DAD2 Is a Candidate Receptor for Strigolactones	225
12.8	What Can Arabidopsis thaliana Tell Us About Parasitic Weed Germination?	226
12.9	Conclusion	228
	References	228
13	Changing Host Specificities: By Mutational Changes or Epigenetic Reprogramming?	231
	Toby J.A. Bruce and Jonathan Gressel
13.1	Introduction	231
13.2	Static Evidence for Intraspecific Variation in Host Specificity	232
13.3	Evidence for Rapid Dynamic Intraspecific Changes in Host Specificity	234
13.4	Critically Differentiating Between Classical Genetic Evolution and Epigenetic Adaptation	234
13.5	Does It Matter to Parasite Management Whether Classical Genetic Evolution or Epigenetic Adaptation?	240
	References	240
14	Phylogenetic Relationships and Evolutionary Trends in Orobanchaceae	243
	Gerald M. Schneeweiss
14.1	Introduction	243
14.2	Phylogenetic Relationships	243
14.3	Phylogenetic Relationships of Weedy Taxa	254
14.4	Evolutionary Trends: Some Examples	257
14.5	Outlook	259
	References	259
15	Genomic Evolution in Orobanchaceae	267
	Susann Wicke
15.1	Introduction	267
15.2	The Nuclear Genome	268
15.3	The Plastid Genome	273
15.4	The Mitochondrial Genome	277
15.5	Horizontal DNA Transfer	278
15.6	Conclusions	279
	References	281

16 Ecology of Hemiparasitic Orobanchaceae with Special Reference to Their Interaction with Plant Communities 287
Duncan D. Cameron and Gareth K. Phoenix

16.1 Introduction 287

16.2 Interactions Between Parasitic Plants and Their Hosts at the Individual Scale 288

16.3 Orobanchaceae in Plant Communities: Multiple Impacts, Multiple Consequences 291

16.4 Interactions Across Multiple Trophic Levels 297

16.5 Parasitic Plant Impacts on Nutrient Cycling 299

16.6 Conclusions and Future Directions 300

References 301

Part II The Weedy Orobanchaceae and Their Control

17 Weedy Orobanchaceae: The Problem 309
Jonathan Gressel and Daniel M. Joel

18 The Parasitic Weeds of the Orobanchaceae 313
Chris Parker

18.1 Introduction 313

18.2 The Weedy Broomrapes: Orobanche and Phelipanche Species 314

18.3 The Weedy Witchweeds: Striga Species 326

18.4 Alectra Species 334

18.5 Rhamphicarpa fistulosa 336

18.6 Other Orobanchaceae Occasionally Proving Weedy 337

18.7 Conclusion 339

References 339

19 Population Diversity and Dynamics of Parasitic Weeds 345
Belén Román

19.1 Introduction 345

19.2 Genetic Diversity and Population Dynamics 346

19.3 Impacts of Life History on Population Demography and Genetics 347

19.4 Future Prospects 353

References 353

20 Molecular Diagnosis of Parasite Seed Banks 357
Jane Prider, Kathy Ophel Keller, and Alan McKay

20.1 Introduction 357

20.2 Sample Collection 358

20.3 Test Development 361

20.4 Test Validation 362

20.5	Test Applications	362
20.6	Other Applications	365
20.7	Conclusions	365
	References	367
21	Marker-Assisted and Physiology-Based Breeding for Resistance to Root Parasitic Orobanchaceae	369
	Begoña Pérez-Vich, Leonardo Velasco, Patrick J. Rich, and Gebisa Ejeta
21.1	Introduction	369
21.2	Physiology-Based Breeding	375
21.3	Marker-Assisted Breeding	378
	References	385
22	Integrated Agronomic Management of Parasitic Weed Seed Banks	393
	Yaakov Goldwasser and Jonne Rodenburg
22.1	Introduction	393
22.2	Phytosanitary Measures	396
22.3	Reduction of Parasite Seed Production and Crop Damage	396
22.4	Methods to Reduce Existing Seed Banks	399
22.5	Integrating Agronomic Management Practices	406
22.6	Conclusions	408
	References	409
23	Chemical Control	415
	Hanan Eizenberg, Joseph Hershenhorn, Jhonathan H. Ephrath, and Fred Kanampiu
23.1	Introduction: The Complexity of Chemical Control of Parasitic Weeds	415
23.2	Herbicides	416
23.3	The Use of Herbicides and Fumigants	420
23.4	Models for Optimizing Herbicide Application	425
23.5	Broomrape Control by Herbicide-Resistant Crops	426
23.6	New and Future Approaches	427
23.7	Conclusions	428
	References	428
24	Biotechnologies for Directly Generating Crops Resistant to Parasites	433
	Jonathan Gressel
24.1	Introduction	433
24.2	Target Site Herbicide Resistances	434
24.3	When Will the Parasites Evolve Herbicide Resistance?	441

24.4 Biotechnologically Directly Conferring Crop Resistance to the Parasites 445

24.5 Other Biotechnological Approaches 451

24.6 Conclusions 452

References 453

25 Allelopathy 459

John A. Pickett, Antony M. Hooper, Charles A.O. Midega, and Zeyaur R. Khan

25.1 Introduction 459

25.2 Allelopathic Mechanism by Which Desmodium Controls Striga in Maize 460

25.3 Long-Term Needs 463

25.4 Conclusions 465

References 465

26 Biocontrol 469

Alan K. Watson

26.1 Introduction 469

26.2 Insects Attacking Broomrapes and Witchweeds 470

26.3 Biocontrol of Parasitic Weeds with Microorganisms 474

26.4 Path to Commercialization of a Striga Bioherbicide 488

26.5 Conclusions and Future Possibilities 489

References 490

Index 499