

Contents

Foreword by Ernst Ulrich von Weizsäcker	7
Introduction	10
Abandoning the Growth Imperative: Shaping a Politics of Moderation	14
Contrary lines of thought in ecological policy	14
1. A true measure of prosperity	27
2. Rolling back a ubiquitous trend towards commercialisation	29
3. New models for working and living	31
4. A new direction for business	36
5. Steering a new course through green and fair taxation	41
6. Supporting socio-ecological innovations	46
7. Protection of public goods and maintenance of public infrastructures	48
8. Regionalisation of economic processes	52
9. Reform of the monetary system	55
Responses to the book “Abandoning the Growth Imperative”	62
The Growth Question: What Lies Ahead?	65
Foreword	65
Why we need more cogent arguments: a preliminary comment	68
1. Doing without the term “doing without”?	73
2. Would it be better just to talk about progress?	77

3. Decoupling instead of degrowth?	84
4. Does green growth offer a way out of the crisis?	90
5. One last time?	93
6. Post-growth society as a “nightmare scenario”?	97
7. Growth critique: cynicism from the well-to-do?	101
8. No jobs without growth?	104
9. Will degrowth cause economic collapse?	106
10. Growth weakness in the North: development crisis in the South?	113
11. A loss of status for Europe?	118
The growth debate: What Lies Ahead?	121
“A good society without growth compulsion!”	123
Notes	131
Responses to the book “The Growth Question: What lies ahead?”	139
Literature	142
1. Additional literature	142
2. References	146
About the Author	151