

Contents

Preface	XI
The Authors	XIII
I Recent Developments in ICM Implementation	1
1 The Inverted Classroom: Where to Go from Here
Jörn Loviscach	3
1.1 Introduction	3
1.2 The ICM and educational research	4
1.3 Video types and video content.....	5
1.4 Video style.....	7
1.5 Additional online elements.....	8
1.6 Activities in the classroom	9
1.7 MOOC-wrapping.....	10
1.8 Conclusion.....	10
2 Beyond a Simple ICM
Jürgen Handke	15
2.1 ICM-based teaching and learning.....	15
2.2 Towards mastery learning	16
2.3 MOOCs	19
3 Activating Students by Inverting and Shuffling the Classroom – Experiences from Employing ICM and I²CM
Clemens Möller	23
3.1 Introduction	24
3.2 Abstract thinking as a major challenge to students.....	24

3.3	Experiences from implementing the Inverted Classroom	27
3.4	Discussion	31
4	Experiences with the Implementation of an Inverted Classroom Course to Promote Key Competences
	Athanasios Vassiliou	35
4.1	Initial situation.....	35
4.2	The AWE-class as a blended learning course.....	36
4.3	The Inverted Classroom Model in the AWE-class	37
4.4	Description of the learning materials used	38
4.5	Advantages of the ICM in comparison to the blended learning concept	40
II	Phase 1 of the Inverted Classroom Model: Content Delivery	43
5	Learning by Contribution – Using Wikis in Higher Education
	Udo Bleimann & Robert Löw	45
5.1	Introduction – from Inverted Classroom to Learning by Contribution	45
5.2	The wiki lecture – our approach	46
5.3	Using wikis – a short overview	49
5.4	A view into the wiki – the results	51
5.5	Outcomes of the wiki lectures	54
5.6	Lessons learned – summary and outlook.....	56
6	The VLC Video Strategy
	Jürgen Handke	59
6.1	Introduction	59
6.2	Quantity assurance and beyond	60
6.3	Video integration and video types	61
6.4	Quality assurance.....	67
6.5	Video production.....	69
6.6	Why YouTube ?	72
6.7	Summary	74
7	Using Videos in the Linguistics Classroom
	Natalie Kiesler	77
7.1	The ICM in linguistics classes at Philipps-University of Marburg.....	77

7.2	Why use videos and the ICM?.....	78
7.3	Video types for the linguistics classroom.....	83
7.4	Reorganization of the class time.....	89
7.5	Conclusion.....	90
8	Flipping Professional Training in Higher Education Didactics – Proposing an Open Video Platform
	Oliver Tacke	93
8.1	Flipping professional training at university.....	93
8.2	Opportunities and challenges of a video platform dedicated to training in higher education didactics.....	94
8.3	A brief proposal.....	96
8.4	Concluding thoughts.....	97
III	Phase 2 of the Inverted Classroom Model: In-Class Activities	101
9	Tutor of the Day – A New Didactic Concept for the Practice Phase of ICM-Based Teaching
	Anne Günther	103
9.1	Development of the Tutor of the Day concept.....	103
9.2	Application.....	104
9.3	Skills.....	107
9.4	Sample exercise.....	108
9.5	Students' evaluation of the Tutor of the Day concept.....	110
9.6	Teachers' evaluation of the Tutor of the Day concept.....	110
9.7	Conclusion.....	110
10	Designing In-Class Activities in the Inverted Classroom Model
	Christian Spannagel & Janna Spannagel	113
10.1	The ICM is not 'video learning'.....	113
10.2	Method 1: Think – Pair – Share	114
10.3	Method 2: The Active Auditorium	115
10.4	Method 3: Lecture games.....	117
10.5	Putting it all together.....	118
10.6	Conclusion and outlook.....	119

11	Clicker-Happy: Audience Response Systems as an Interface between Pre-Class Preparation and In-Class Session
	Leonie Wiemeyer	121
11.1	What is an audience response system?	121
11.2	Application of ARSs in teaching	123
11.3	Benefits and disadvantages of audience response systems	125
11.4	Audience response systems in the Inverted Classroom	127
11.5	Conclusion and outlook	132
IV	Implementation of the ICM in High School	135
12	Flipped Learning in the Science Classroom
	Brian E. Bennett	137
12.1	Problems in my classroom	137
12.2	Conditioning students in a traditional classroom	138
12.3	Introducing videos to the science classroom	139
12.4	Unexpected initial results	140
12.5	The Personalized System of Instruction	140
12.6	Starting fresh – rethinking my approach to Flipped Instruction	141
12.7	Inquiry learning – examples and applications	141
12.8	Project-based learning – examples and applications	142
12.9	Changing grading practices in a mastery learning environment	143
12.10	Student response to mastery learning	144
12.11	Implications for future schools	144
13	Inverting the History Classroom – A First-Hand Report
	Daniel Bernsen	147
13.1	Inverting the high school classroom	147
13.2	From teacher controlled lessons to student controlled learning	149
13.3	How to start flipping a history classroom and what to do within the lesson at school	150
13.4	Conclusion	153

14	Inverting a Competence-Based EFL Classroom – A Model for Advanced Learner Activation?
	Dirk Weidmann	155
14.1	The emergence of the German national standards of education and its impacts on contemporary foreign language teaching.....	156
14.2	Learning-task schemes as long-term planning tools.....	157
14.3	Learner activation in a learning-task environment	160
14.4	Ten steps towards establishing a learner-centred ICM within a learning-task environment	163
14.5	Conclusion.....	169
References		173
Index		183