

Contents

Abbreviations — XXIV

General Introduction — 1

Part One: Whitehead's Metaphysics of Becoming

1	Metaphysics of Becoming: Setting the Context — 21
1.1	Greek Philosophy to Scientific Materialism — 22
1.2	Whitehead's Response to the Greek Outlook of Nature — 23
1.2.1	The Emergence of Materialism in Modernity — 25
1.2.1.1	The Doctrine of Simple Location — 28
1.2.1.2	Whitehead and Classical Physics — 29
1.2.1.3	The Metaphysical Dualism of ' Res Extensa and Res Cogitans ' — 31
1.2.1.4	Newton's Mechanistic View of the Universe — 34
1.2.2	Whitehead's Response to Scientific Materialism — 35
1.3	The Positive Influences — 38
1.3.1	The Re-construction of Physical Sciences — 38
1.3.2	The Romantic Movement — 39
1.3.3	An Inevitable Shift in Methodology — 41
2	Whitehead's Metaphysics of Indefinite Pluralities in Becoming — 45
2.1	Being to Beingness in Becoming — 45
2.1.1	The Fundamental Principle of Becoming — 47
2.1.2	The Enigma of Becoming — 49
2.2	Fundamental Reality in Whitehead — 51
2.2.1	Actual Occasion: the Dynamic Subject — 53
2.2.2	The Constitution of an Actual Occasion — 54
2.2.2.1	The Theory of Concrescence — 55
2.2.2.2	The Concept of Prehension — 56
2.2.2.3	Satisfaction — 61
2.3	The Characteristics of Actual Occasion — 63
2.3.1	Actual Occasion: A Unity of the Physical and Mental Poles — 64
2.3.1.1	The Physical Pole — 65
2.3.1.2	The Conceptual Pole — 65
2.3.2	Actual Occasion: A Self-actualising Concrescence — 66
2.3.3	Actual Occasion: An Experience of Being Subject-Superject — 69
2.4	The Eternal Objects: Pure Potentials for Actual Occasion — 70

2.4.1	The Ontological Necessity of the Eternal Objects —	71
2.4.2	The Complimentarity of the Actual and the Eternal —	73
3	Creativity: The Raison d'être of Becoming —	75
3.1	The Distinctive Features of Creativity —	75
3.1.1	The Emergence of the Concept Creativity —	76
3.1.2	Creativity: The Pure Notion of the Activity —	78
3.1.3	Creativity: A Meta-theoretical Concept —	79
3.2	Creativity: the Metaphysical Ultimate in Whitehead —	81
3.3	Different Interpretations of Creativity —	83
3.3.1	Creativity: The Self-Caused Subjective Feeling —	83
3.3.2	Creativity: Monistic or Pluralistic? —	84
3.3.3	Creativity as Eternal Object —	86
3.3.4	Creativity as Future Becoming —	87
3.4	Creativity: The Raison d'être of Becoming —	89
3.4.1	Creativity: the Innate Nature of Every Actuality —	89
3.4.2	Creativity: the Principle of Creative Advance —	91
3.4.3	Creativity: the Principle of Novelty —	93
4	God and the Metaphysics of Becoming —	96
4.1	God and the Metaphysical Principles —	96
4.2	God and the Metaphysics of Becoming —	98
4.2.1	God: A Metaphysical Necessity —	99
4.2.2	God: An Actual Entity —	101
4.2.3	The Dipolar Nature of God —	101
4.2.3.1	The Primordial Nature of God —	103
4.2.3.2	The Consequent Nature of God —	104
4.2.4	God: The Principle of Limitation —	108
4.2.5	The Vindication of the Refuted —	110
4.3	God-World Relation in Whitehead's Metaphysics of Becoming —	114
4.3.1	God the Creator and the Metaphysics of Becoming —	115
4.3.2	God: the Reservoir of Potentiality —	117
4.3.3	God: the Source of Novelty —	119
4.3.4	God: the Principle of Order and Harmony —	120
4.3.5	God: the Source of the Initial Aim —	121
4.4	The Religious Significance of Whitehead's God —	123
4.4.1	The Complexity of the Subject —	124
4.4.2	The Goodness of God versus the Will of God —	127
4.4.3	God: the Wisdom that Permeates the Universe —	130

4.4.4 Metaphysics of Becoming without God — 132

Part Two: Aurobindo's Integral Advaita and the Metaphysics of Becoming5 Integral Advaita: Its Place within the Indian Philosophical Tradition — 141

- 5.1 Fundamental Presuppositions of Aurobindo's Metaphysics — 142
- 5.2 Aurobindo and Vedanta Philosophy — 144
 - 5.2.1 Aurobindo and Advaita Philosophy of Shankara — 145
 - 5.2.1.1 Shankara's Theory of Reality — 146
 - 5.2.1.2 Aurobindo's Response to Absolute Non-Dualism — 149
 - 5.2.2 Aurobindo and the Vishishtadvaita of Ramanuja — 151
 - 5.2.2.1 Ramanuja's Theory of Reality — 151
 - 5.2.2.2 Aurobindo's Response to Qualified Non-Dualism — 154
 - 5.2.3 Dvaitavata of Madhva — 155
 - 5.2.3.1 Theory of Difference and Dependence — 156
 - 5.2.3.2 The Ontology of Madhva — 157
 - 5.2.3.3 Aurobindo and Absolute Dualism — 158
- 5.3 Aurobindo and Different Theories of Existence — 160
 - 5.3.1 The Supracosmic View — 160
 - 5.3.1.1 The Distinctive Nature of the Supracosmic View — 161
 - 5.3.1.2 The Supracosmic View and Integral Advaitism of Aurobindo — 162
 - 5.3.2 The Cosmic-terrestrial View — 163
 - 5.3.2.1 The Distinctiveness of the Cosmic-terrestrial View — 163
 - 5.3.2.2 The Cosmic-terrestrial View and Integral Advaitism — 164
 - 5.3.3 The Supraterrestrial View — 166
 - 5.3.3.1 Distinguishing Features of the Supra-terrestrial View — 167
 - 5.3.3.2 Aurobindo's Response to the Theories of Existence — 167

6 Integral Advaita: A Metaphysics of Becoming — 170

- 6.1 The Integral Advaitic View of Existence — 170
 - 6.1.1 The Name Integral Advaita — 171
 - 6.1.2 Distinctiveness of Integral Yoga — 173
- 6.2 Aurobindo's Interpretation of the Concept of Maya — 175
 - 6.2.1 Maya: the Power of Becoming in Indian Philosophy — 177
 - 6.2.2 Maya: The Self's Experience of Its Being — 180
 - 6.2.3 Maya: Not a Passive Notion but a Dynamic Notion — 181
- 6.3 Dipolar Nature of the Reality — 184
 - 6.3.1 Matter as the Foundational Substratum of Existence — 185

6.3.2	The Relation between Matter and Spirit —	186
6.3.3	Dipolarity is Not Dichotomy —	188
6.4	The Concept of Evolution: A Process Toward Integral Unity —	190
6.4.1	The Idea of Evolution in Indian Philosophy —	190
6.4.2	Aurobindo's Vision of Evolution —	191
6.4.2.1	Distinctiveness of Aurobindo's Concept of Evolution —	192
6.4.2.2	Teleology Central to Aurobindo's Concept of Evolution —	193
6.5	Cosmic Consciousness: the Locus of Becoming —	196
6.5.1	The Individual and the Efficacy of Cosmic Consciousness —	197
6.5.2	Cosmic Consciousness: the Source of Reconciliation —	198
6.6	The One and the Many: The Way of Being in Becoming —	200
6.6.1	The Absolute: Unity Manifesting Multiplicity —	200
6.6.2	The Infinite: the Locus of Unity —	202

7 Sachchidananda and the Metaphysics of Becoming — 205

7.1	The Concept of the Absolute in Philosophy —	205
7.1.1	Brahman: the Absolute in Indian Philosophy —	206
7.1.2	Aurobindo's Understanding of the Absolute —	207
7.2	The Understanding of God in Indian Philosophy —	210
7.2.1	The Subjective Dimension of Brahman —	210
7.2.2	The Objective Dimension of Brahman —	213
7.3	Sachchidananda: The Absolute in Aurobindo —	216
7.3.1	Sachchidananda: The Greatest Achievement of Vedanta —	217
7.3.2	The Trinity of Sachchidananda —	218
7.3.2.1	The Absolute as Pure Existence (Sat) —	219
7.3.2.2	The Absolute as Consciousness-Force (Cit-Shakti) —	221
7.3.2.3	The Absolute as Bliss (Ananda) —	223
7.3.2.4	The Inter-dependent Nature of the Trilogy —	225
7.4	Sachchidananda and the Metaphysics of Becoming —	227
7.4.1	The Involution of the Absolute —	228
7.4.1.1	Why Involution or the Becoming? —	229
7.4.1.2	Involution: The Becoming of the Absolute —	232
7.4.2	The Effects of Involution —	234
7.4.2.1	Theory of World as the Manifestation —	235
7.4.2.2	Sachchidananda: The Substratum and the Cause of the Universe —	238

8 The Supermind: The Raison d'être of Becoming — 241

8.1	The Supermind —	241
8.1.1	Vedic Roots of the Supermind —	242

8.1.2	The Distinctive Nature of the Supermind —	244
8.1.3	The Triple Status of the Supermind —	245
8.1.3.1	Comprehending Consciousness or Transcendent Status —	246
8.1.3.2	The Apprehending Consciousness —	247
8.1.3.3	The Projecting Consciousness —	248
8.1.3.4	Combined Activity – The Way of Being-Becoming —	248
8.2	The Mind and the Supermind —	250
8.2.1	In the Realm of Epistemology —	251
8.2.2	Spatio-temporal Limitation of the Mind —	252
8.2.3	Supermind: Identity of the Ideal and Actual —	253
8.2.4	The Transformative Ascent from Mind to the Supermind —	254
8.2.4.1	The Higher Mind —	256
8.2.4.2	The Illumined Mind —	257
8.2.4.3	The Intuitive Mind —	257
8.2.4.4	The Overmind —	259
8.2.5	The Supramental Transformation —	261
8.3	The Supermind: Its Role, Relevance and Ultimacy —	262
8.3.1	Supermind: An Onto-logical Necessity —	262
8.3.2	Supermind: The Intermediate Link —	263
8.3.3	Supermind: The Creative Principle —	265
8.3.4	Supermind: Principle of Reconciliation —	266
8.3.5	Supermind: The Ordering and Harmonising Principle —	268
8.3.6	Supermind: The Raison d'être of Becoming —	271

Part Three: On the Relationship between Creativity and God and Supermind and Sachchidananda

9	On the Relationship between God and Creativity in Whitehead and Sachchidananda and Supermind in Aurobindo —	281
9.1	The Ultimacy of God and Creativity —	282
9.1.1	God and Creativity Clearly Distinguished —	283
9.1.2	Different Approaches and Re-configurings —	287
9.1.2.1	The Identification of Creativity and God —	287
9.1.2.2	God: the Source of Creativity —	289
9.1.2.3	The Immanent Interdependence of God and Creativity —	292
9.2	The Ultimacy of Sachchidananda and the Supermind —	295
9.2.1	One in Essence and Dipolar in Existence —	295
9.2.2	Supermind: The Icon of Sachchidananda —	297
9.2.2.1	Supermind: The God Aspect of Sachchidananda —	298

9.2.2.2	Supermind: The Truth-Consciousness of Sachchidananda —	300
9.3	The Raison d'être for the Distinction of God and Creativity —	302
9.3.1	On the Demand of the Question of Evil —	303
9.3.2	On the Demand of Freedom —	309
9.4	The Sine qua non for the Interdependence of Sachchidananda and Supermind —	311
9.4.1	On the Ground of Theism and Monism —	312
9.4.2	The Problem of Evil —	314
9.4.2.1	The Complexity of the Problem —	315
9.4.2.2	God the Creator and the Enigma of Evil —	316
9.4.2.3	Evil and Divine Bliss —	318
9.4.2.4	The Interplay of Good and Evil —	320
9.4.2.5	Evil and Divine Economy —	321
10	Toward an East-West Intermediation in the Metaphysics of Becoming in the Context of the Distinction between Metaphysics and Religion —	324
10.1	The Distinctiveness of the West in Doing Philosophy —	325
10.1.1	Reason: Central to Western Philosophy —	326
10.1.2	Medieval Philosophy: A Combination of Faith and Reason —	330
10.2	The Influence of the Enlightenment and Modernity —	332
10.2.1	Modernity and Rationality —	334
10.2.1.1	Modernity and the Question of Transcendence —	335
10.2.1.2	The Emergence of Immanent Transcendence —	338
10.2.2	The Separation of Metaphysics and Religion in the West —	341
10.3	Whitehead's Distance from Modernity —	346
10.3.1	Religious and Metaphysical Ultimate as Distinct —	346
10.3.2	The Metaphysical and the Religious Ultimate are Different —	351
10.4	The Way of Doing Philosophy in the East —	354
10.4.1	The Distinctiveness of the East —	355
10.4.1.1	Darsna Versus Weltanschauung —	356
10.4.1.2	Existence Is Value —	358
10.4.1.3	Sense of Transcendence —	361
10.4.2	Religion and Philosophy: Two Modes of Expressions —	363
10.4.2.1	Religion, Philosophy and Freedom —	365
10.4.2.2	Philosophy and Religion: Distinct but not Separate —	365
10.4.3	The Complementarity of Faith and Reason —	369
10.4.3.1	The Role and the Limitations of Reason —	370
10.4.3.2	Human Reason: A Mediator not an Angel —	372
10.4.3.3	Reason Transcending to the Realm of Intuition —	374

10.5	The Middle Way of Whitehead and Aurobindo —	377
11	General Conclusion —	380
11.1	Resumé —	380
11.2	Whitehead and Aurobindo and East-West Dialogue —	383
11.2.1	Being and Becoming: an Attempt to Think them Together —	383
11.2.2	A Synthetic Approach to Matter and Spirit —	391
11.2.3	The Realism of Whitehead and Aurobindo —	393
11.2.4	Teleology and Purpose versus Nihilism —	395
11.2.5	Religion and Philosophy: Distinction Versus Separation —	398
11.2.6	Reason and Intuition: Two Sources of Philosophy —	400
11.2.7	Reason and Experience Combined: A New Paradigm —	402
11.3	An Attitude of Engagement Rather than Estrangement —	411
	References —	418