

Table of Contents

Preface	11
1. Introduction.....	13
1.1 Kerschensteiner's approach – conservative modernisation	15
1.2 The literature on Georg Kerschensteiner	17
1.3 The structure of the book.....	18
1.4 The modernity of vocational education or the rediscovery of the German classical period of vocational pedagogy	20

Part I

Kerschensteiner as an Educator

2. The Pedagogue Georg Kerschensteiner: A Brief Biography	25
3. The German Concept of Bildung and School Reform in the 19 th Century.....	31
3.1 Humboldt and Condorcet.....	32
3.2 The Philanthropists and the Neo-humanists	36
3.3 Conclusion.....	39
4. Joy in Work – Germany's Educational Debates in the Industrial Age.....	41
4.1 The 'horrors of the dominant industrial state' and how pedagogy failed to perceive them	41
4.2 Educational institutions as contributing to the labour question (social reform as a means to forestall socialism).....	45
4.3 Joy in work through education for arts and crafts in the age of industry	50

4.4	Pedagogical conversion and implementation	57
4.5	Conclusions	59
5.	Georg Kerschensteiner's Concept of the 'Arbeitsschule' – A Plea for Work as a Foundation for Education	63
5.1	Organisation and structure of Begriff der Arbeitsschule	63
5.2	The state, vocation and work	72
5.3	The Arbeitsschule as school reform: from Herbart to Pestalozzi and Dewey	79
5.4	Personality, character and work	83
5.5	Work and education	87
5.6	Topicality and effects	90
5.7	Conclusion	91
6.	Kerschensteiner as the 'Pestalozzi of Our Time' A Pedagogical Hero and His Tragedy	93
6.1	Pestalozzi as Counter-Herbart (the Natorpian turn)	94
6.2	Pestalozzi redivivus in the German Länder Spranger's approach to Kerschensteiner	103
6.3	The faded heroes	111

Part 2

Kerschensteiner in Relation to Dewey, Weber and Simmel

7.	School Reform and Pragmatism: John Dewey's Ambiguous Impact on Modernisation in Germany	115
7.1	Dewey as school reformer – Kerschensteiner's view	116
7.2	Dewey as the father of teaching through projects: the Petersen Foundation	121
7.3	Dewey as a psychologist of learning: more Herbartian than the Herbartians	126
7.4	Dewey and the generation of 1968	130
7.5	Conclusions	133

8.	Education as Self-guidance – Max Weber’s Alternative to Liberal Education.....	137
8.1	Max Weber and Georg Kerschensteiner.....	138
8.2	Education and vocation as pedagogical topics: Kerschensteiner and Spranger	140
8.3	Vocation and education as sociological topics	142
8.4	Weber’s understanding of education between professionalism and life reform.....	144
8.5	Weber’s and Kerschensteiner’s lectures on the topic of ‘vocation’ in Munich.....	145
8.6	Politics as a vocation	147
8.7	Professional politicians without a profession – Weber’s paradox of the non-learnable vocation	150
8.8	Education as a vocation	151
8.9	The educator as a gifted shaper of souls – Kerschensteiner’s paradox of the non-learnable vocation	154
8.10	Science as a vocation.....	155
8.11	Science as a modern vocational paradigm.....	158
8.12	Vocational education between calling and bureaucracy.....	159
8.13	Charisma and conduct of life: education between passion and self-limitation.....	160
8.14	Conclusion: education as self-management.....	162
9.	Georg Simmel’s Discourse of Life and Form as a Blueprint for Georg Kerschensteiner’s Theory of Education	165
9.1	Goethe’s ‘full personality’ and cultural criticism.....	166
9.2	Life and “the tragedy of culture”	170
9.3	Pedagogy and the discourse of life	172
9.4	Contemporary criticism on Lebensphilosophie	173
9.5	Kerschensteiner’s approach: work as a means to overcome the contrast between life and form.....	177
9.6	Spranger and Simmel as central points of reference for Kerschensteiner’s theory of education.....	180
9.7	The Simmel-Kerschensteiner controversy.....	185

Part 3

Kerschensteiner in Relation to Systems of Vocational Education and Vocational Educational Reform

10. Apprenticeship, Vocational Education and the Rise of the Dual System.....	193
10.1 Education and vocational education as a contribution to the uplifting of the lower classes.....	193
10.2 Adam Smith's critique of apprenticeship	197
10.3 The role of education and vocational education in Bastiat's and Hayek's theory	202
10.4 Vocational education as a contribution to the solution of the social question	204
10.5 The social question and pedagogy	207
10.6 Conclusion	208
11. Efficiency and Vocationalism as Structuring Principles of Vocation-oriented Education in the USA	209
11.1 Introduction	209
11.2 Efficiency and vocationalism as focal points	210
11.3 Efficiency as a parallel of academic education and industrial production	211
11.4 Efficiency as a historical argument of reform pedagogy.....	212
11.5 Manual work in elementary school as a contribution to external efficiency.....	214
11.6 Vocationalism and vocational schools as contributions to 'social efficiency'	215
11.7 Vocational schools as alternatives and complement to comprehensive high schools	216
11.8 Examination of the German apprenticeship system	217
11.9 Vocationalism as a constitutive element in school curricula: how vocational education found its way into the schools	218
11.10 Spread and ambivalence of vocationalism.....	219

11.11 Efficiency as an argument against vocationalism: Snedden's utopia "1960"	221
11.12 Conclusion	222
12. The Development of Vocational Pedagogy in Germany	225
12.1 The institutional basis and historical-scientific premises of vocational pedagogy.....	225
12.2 Vocational pedagogy in the early 1960s.....	231
12.3 The critique of the theory of vocational education	243
12.4 Fading out – the paradox legacy of the classics.....	247
Notes on the Chapters.....	249
References	251
Index of Names.....	275