

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

Overview of study context	16
The nature of the study	19
Thesis structure	21

CHAPTER ONE: VIOLENCE AGAINST CHILDREN

1.1 Childhood – The space where children happen	22
1.1.1 A short glimpse at the 'history of childhood'	22
1.1.2 Deconstructing childhood – The sociological and the psychological perspectives	23
1.1.3 Childhood in the Western society	25
1.1.4 Childhood in Eastern Africa	26
1.1.5 The emergence of the 'universal childhood'	28
1.2 The social construction of violence	31
1.2.1 Social constructionism	32
1.2.2 Typologies of violence	36
1.2.3 The nature of violence	38
1.3 What is known about violence against children in Kenya	45
1.3.1 Kenya's demographic and historical setting	46
1.3.2 Violence against children in Kenya – Empirical studies	46
1.3.3 Emerging concerns about violence against children	51
1.3.4 Situating Kenya in the broader context of East Africa	52

CHAPTER TWO: THE ECOLOGICAL MODEL OF SOCIALIZATION

2.1 Defining socialization	57
2.2 The ecological model – Its roots	59
2.3 The social ecology of violence against children	61
2.3.1 Microsystem – The individual child factors	62
2.3.2 Mesosystem – The family and relationship factors	63
2.3.3 Exosystem – The community factors	65
2.3.4 Macrosystem – The societal factors	66
2.4 Applying the ecological model in researching violence	67
2.5 Implications for the research questions	69

CHAPTER THREE: THE RESEARCH DESIGN

3.1 The research design	71
3.2 The research methods – Qualitative, quantitative and mixed method	72
3.3 The case study – Explaining and describing "how" and "why"	72
3.4 Tools and techniques for data collection	83
3.5 Qualitative data analysis in grounded theory	91
3.6 Ethical considerations, validity, reliability and findings validations	96

CHAPTER FOUR: THE RISK FACTORS AND THE CONSEQUENCES OF VIOLENCE AGAINST CHILDREN IN KENYA

4.1 Profiling the thirty children sampled and interviewed	102
4.2 Risk factors perpetuating violence against children	107
4.2.1 The microsystem risk factors – The individual child	108
4.2.2 The mesosystem risk factors – The family level	112
4.2.3 The exosystem risk factors – The community	117
4.2.4 The macrosystem risk factors – The society	122
4.3 The Consequences of violence against children	127
4.3.1 Microsystem consequences – The individual child	127
4.3.2 Mesosystem consequences – The family	131
4.3.3 Exosystem consequences – The community	133
4.3.4 Macrosystem consequences – The society	138

CHAPTER FIVE: THE RESPONSES TO VIOLENCE AND PROJECTS PREVENTING VIOLENCE AGAINST CHILDREN IN KENYA

5.1 Profiling projects preventing violence against children	145
5.1.1 Defining programmes and projects	146
5.1.2 Definition of a project management cycle	147
5.2 Violence prevention projects	149
5.2.1 The Child Link Project Kisumu	150
5.2.2 KUAP-Pandipieri Children's Services Project	153
5.2.3 Brydges Centre Children's Home	157
5.2.4 Solidarity with Women in Distress – SOLWODI KENYA	160
5.2.5 Projects analysis – Emerging trends	163
5.3 Profiling policies for violence prevention	167
5.3.1 From international laws to national policies	167
5.3.2 The concept of a policy life cycle	168
5.3.3 Stages of the policy cycle	170
5.4 Prevention of violence against children: Policies and strategies	173
5.4.1 Emerging trends in policy development processes	176
5.5 Responses to violence against children	179
5.5.1 Responses at the microsystem level concerning the individual child	180
5.5.2 Responses at the mesosystem level concerning family and relationship	183
5.5.3 Responses at the exosystem level concerning the community	187
5.5.4 Responses at the macrosystem level concerning the society	190

CHAPTER SIX: SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS

6.1 Summary of key findings: Risk factors and consequences	195
6.1.1 The risk factors.....	196
6.1.2 The consequences.....	199
6.2 Summary of key findings: Responses and violence prevention projects	201
6.2.1 Responses to the violation of children	201
6.2.2 Projects preventing violence against children	202
6.3 Significance and implications of the study findings.....	204
6.3.1 Implications for theory	204
6.3.2 Implications for practice	206
6.3.3 Implications for policy	209
6.3.4 Future research	212
6.4 Study limitations and achievements.....	213

REFERENCES.....	216
------------------------	------------

APPENDICES.....	227
------------------------	------------