PART 1

On the Study of Apparent Motion, Apparent Corporeality and Apparent Spatiality

Seeing as a Scientific Topic .....	15
The Beginnings of the Study of Apparent Motion .....	21
An Individual Way of Seeing: Jan Evangelista Purkinje .....	24
The Explanation of an Optical Illusion : Peter Mark Roget .....	31
The First Motion Picture Machine : Joseph Plateau .....	33
The Phenakistoscope or the Stroboscopic Disk .....	34
Inventions with Stroboscopic Effects .....	39
The Talbot-Plateau Law of 1834/35 .....	42
Gustav Theodor Fechner's Subjective Colors .....	45
Four Notes on Afterimages .....	47
Experiments on the Simulation of Riparian Illusion with the Oppel Antirheoscope .....	50
Zöllner's Illusion .....	52
Reflections on Zöllner's Illusion: Wilhelm Filehne .....	56
Hermann Helmholtz and the New Physiological Optics in the Nineteenth Century .....	59
Helmholtz's Experiments on Visual Sensations .....	61
Ernst Brücke: The Advantage of Intermittent Retina Stimuli .....	64
Josef Czermak: Thoughts on Speed during Motional Illusions .....	67
The Influence of Psychophysics on Mach's Experiments .....	68
Mach's Series of Experiments on Light Stimulus on the Retina .....	71

Mach's Experiments on Sensation of Movement and Afterimages of Movement .....	81
Studies in Movement: The Mach Drum .....	84
Sigmund Exner: Explorations into Kinesthetics, Sensation of Movement and Apparent Motion .....	87
Two Sparks and One Apparent Motion .....	89
Johann Ignaz Hoppe's Attempts at Defining Apparent Motion .....	97
The First Psychological Analyses of Stroboscopic Phenomena (1886) .....	99
James McKeen Cattell: Visual Stimulation in Time .....	101
The First Monograph on the Perception of Movement .....	103
Alfred Borschke and Leo Heschels: Movement Afterimages and Speed of Movement .....	106
Adolf Szily's Experimental Analysis: Moving Afterimage and Contrasts of Movement .....	108
Szily's Instrument Based Observations .....	110
Adolf Basler: Memoranda on the Process of Movements of Afterimages ....	113
Vittorio Benussi: From Apparent Motion to Apparent Corporeality .....	115
Stroboscopic Apparent Motion (S-Movement), 1912 .....	118
Combinations of Apparent Motion (1918) .....	122
Stereo Kinetics .....	126
Max Wertheimer: The Berlin Gestalt Psychology .....	130
Wertheimer's Phi-Phenomena (1910–1912) .....	132
From Apparent Motion to a Repositioning of Psychology as a Whole .....	140
Application of a Theory for Types of Visual Perception .....	141
Karl Duncker: On Induced Movements .....	143
Herbert Kleint: Simulation of a Tilted Room .....	146
The Inverted Image of the Retina .....	150
George M. Stratton and the Experiment with Inversion Goggles .....	152
Early Experimental Perception Research at the Innsbruck University: Franz Hillebrand, Theodor Erismann, Ivo Kohler .....	157
Theodor Erismann and Ivo Kohler's Goggle Experiment .....	159
Consecutive Experiments with Inversion Goggles after 1955 .....	165
Resume of Part I .....	169

PART 2

From the Artistic Transformation to Immateriality

The Beginnings of Kinetic Art at the Turn of the Twentieth Century .....	174
From Schumann/Wertheimer Wheel-Tachistoscope to Duchamp's Readymade Roue de bicyclette (Bicycle Wheel) .....	176
Influence of Perception Research on Art after 1960 .....	183
Artistic Research: Alfons Schilling, Jeffrey Shaw, Peter Weibel .....	185
Discerning Participatory Capacity and Phenomenological Narration: Jeffrey Shaw .....	186
Addiction to New Images: Alfons Schilling .....	208
From Perception Devices to Seeing Machines .....	215
Visual Test Situations between Experiment and Theory: Peter Weibel .....	225
The Observation of Observation in Peter Weibel's Work .....	237
Construction of Imaginary Spaces and Observations in Apparent Spaces ...	244
Interactive Images and Dislocation .....	256
Interactive Plasticity in the Virtual Image .....	260
Feedback-Effects .....	268
