Preface — V

Part I: The Task and Scope of Ontology

- 1 Ontology as a Philosophical Discipline — 3
 - 1.1 The Idea of Inventory — 3
 - 1.2 A Typological Characterization — 6
 - 1.3 Applied Ontology — 8

- 2 Ontology in Its Different Varieties — 11
 - 2.1 Formal Ontology — 12
 - 2.2 Regional Ontology — 15
 - 2.3 Ontology and Meta-ontology — 16

- 3 Logical Tools for Ontological Analysis — 18
 - 3.1 Consistency — 18
 - 3.2 Thought Experiments — 19
 - 3.3 Quantifiers — 21
 - 3.4 The Existential Import of Quantification — 28
 - 3.5 The Meaning of “Being” — 30

- 4 Mereological Tools of Ontological Analysis — 35
 - 4.1 Parts and Proper Parts — 36
 - 4.2 Atoms and Wholes — 38
 - 4.3 Universe — 41
 - 4.4 Atomless Universe — 44

Part II: Ontological Categories

- 5 Categories as Uppermost Kinds — 47
 - 5.1 A Simplified Universe — 48
 - 5.2 The Diairetic Procedure — 49

- 6 Categorial Realism — 52
 - 6.1 Two Kinds of Predication — 55

6.2	Substance and Accident —	57
6.3	Kinds and Species —	59
6.4	Properties of Substance —	60
7	Modalities —	64
7.1	Four Modes of Being —	64
7.2	De dicto and De re Modality —	66
7.3	Possible Worlds —	69
7.4	The Ontology of Possible Worlds —	72
8	Categorial Conceptualism —	77
8.1	Categories as Uppermost Concepts —	77
8.2	Schematized Categories —	82
8.3	Meanings and Objects —	85
9	Parts and Wholes —	89
9.1	Essentialism —	90
9.2	Universalism —	93
9.3	Nihilism —	97
10	Natural Kinds and Ordering Strategies —	99
10.1	Examples —	101
10.2	Categorial Relativity —	103
10.3	Categorial Frameworks —	104
 Part III: The Nature of Existence
11	Non-being —	107
11.1	The Impossibility of Non-being —	107
11.2	Being Differently —	108
11.3	A Case for Ontological Disagreement —	109
12	Being and Existence —	112
12.1	Nuclear and Extra-Nuclear Properties —	113
12.2	Objections —	116
12.3	Possible Objects —	117
13	Ontological Commitment —	120
13.1	Existence and Quantification —	120

- 13.2 Real and Unreal Individuals — 122
- 13.3 A Suggestion from Semantics — 125
- 13.4 Ontological Questions as Quantificational Questions — 127
- 13.5 Applications and Challenges — 132
- 14 Identity — 137
 - 14.1 Indiscernibility of the Identicals — 137
 - 14.2 Identity of Indiscernibles — 138
 - 14.3 Identification of Indiscernibles — 141

Part IV: Ontological Proofs

- 15 The Existence of God — 147
 - 15.1 The Classical Ontological Proof — 147
 - 15.2 Existence as a Positive Predicate (I) — 150
 - 15.3 The Meaning of “God” — 151
 - 15.4 A Formalization of the Ontological Proof — 153
 - 15.5 Informal Evaluation of the Proof — 157
- 16 God as an A Priori Idea — 159
 - 16.1 Existence as Implied by a Concept’s Origin — 159
 - 16.2 God as a Guarantee for Itself — 160
 - 16.3 Possibility and Actuality of God — 162
- 17 Gödel’s Proof — 166
 - 17.1 Existence as a Positive Predicate (II) — 166
 - 17.2 The Proof — 167
 - 17.3 Remarks on the Proof — 171

Part V: Kinds of Being

- 18 Three Classical Views about Universals — 177
 - 18.1 Realism — 178
 - 18.2 Challenges to Realism — 180
 - 18.3 Conceptualism — 182
 - 18.4 Challenges to Conceptualism — 183
 - 18.5 Nominalism — 187
 - 18.6 Challenges to Nominalism — 190

19	The Standard Approaches to Concrete Entities — 194
19.1	Two Thought Experiments — 195
19.2	Three-dimensional Entities — 197
19.3	Tropes — 199
19.4	Entia Successiva — 201
19.5	Four-dimensional Entities — 204
20	The Ontological Import of Mathematics — 209
20.1	No Mathematical Entities — 209
20.2	Naturalism — 212
20.3	Platonism — 214
20.4	Constructivism — 219
21	Elements of Social Ontology — 223
21.1	Ontological Commitment in Ordinary Language — 224
21.2	Moderate Realism: Brute and Institutional Facts — 226
21.3	Moderate Realism: Assignment of Function — 228
21.4	An Ontological Underpinning — 230
	Relativism and Ontological Relativity — 233
	Bibliography — 237
	Index — 249
