1. Introduction 19

1.1 The Micro-Integration of Europe through Inter-Regional Projects 19

1.1.1 Theoretical Framework: Differentiated Learning within the European Union 20

1.1.2 The Empirical Analysis: Cooperation and Lesson-Drawing within Interreg 23

1.2 Research Design: A Qualitative Network Analysis of an Inter-Regional Case Study 25

2. Differentiation through Inter-Regional Learning: Heterogeneity and the Need for Micro-Integration 28

2.1 Integration despite Heterogeneity: The Softening and Differentiation of Integration 30

2.1.1 The Environment for Integration: The Complexity of the 'European Onion' 31

2.1.2 Differentiated Governance in Europe: From Hierarchical to Soft Governance 32

2.1.3 Differentiated Integration: From the Integrated Union to the Learning Union 34

2.2 From Heterogeneity to Micro-Integration: Making Use of Learning and Lesson-Drawing 39

2.2.1 Defining Learning: Processes, Concepts and Typologies 40

2.2.1.1 European Learning on Policies: From Policy Transfer to Lesson-Drawing 41

2.2.2 Defining Lesson-Drawing: Learning from Experiences on Existing Policies 44

2.2.3 Categorising Lesson-Drawing: From the Copying of Policies to Inspiration 45
2.2.3.1 The Preparation of Learning: Scanning and Understanding Lessons 46
2.2.3.2 First Degree: Copying or Emulating Programmes on One-to-One Basis 46
2.2.3.3 Second Degree: Mixing Programmes from Different Places 47
2.2.3.4 Third Degree: Inspiration and Cherry-Picking from Existing Programmes 48
2.3 From Heterogeneity to Differentiation: Spatial and Functional Micro-Integration in Europe 49
2.3.1 Differentiation in the European Reality: The Roots of the Political Debate 50
2.3.2 Differentiation in Theory: Flexible, Non-Homogeneous Integration in Europe 51
2.3.2.1 Defining Differentiation and its Consequences 52
2.3.3 The Early Concepts: Differentiation of the Grand Steps of Integration 54
2.3.3.1 The Contrasting View: Community Method of Homogeneous Integration 56
2.3.3.2 Multi-Speed Differentiation: Temporary Need for Flexibility 56
2.3.3.3 À la Carte Differentiation: Voluntary Interest-based Differentiation 58
2.3.3.4 Spatial Differentiation: Variable Geography of a Deepened Integration 58
2.3.3.5 Limitations: State-Centric Perspective on the Grand Steps of Integration 59
2.3.4 Recent Developments: Soft and Multi-Level Differentiation in the European Union 60
2.3.4.1 The Role of Space and Levels in Differentiated Integration 65
2.3.4.2 The 'Softening' of Differentiated Integration 66

2.4 Conclusions: Differentiated Micro-Integration through Inter-Regional Projects 67
2.4.1 The European Micro-Integration: Opening the Blackbox of Integration 68
2.4.2 The Functional and Spatial Differentiation of Europe: Voluntary Learning à la Carte 70

3. Micro-Integration through Its Instruments: The Role of Inter-Regional Cooperation in Europe 74

3.1 Differentiation by Its Instruments: The Network-Turn in European Integration 75
3.1.1 Definitions and Analytical Perspectives of Governance Studies 75
3.1.1.1 Positioning Networks in the Governance Studies – From Hierarchies to Networks 77
3.1.2 Policy Networks: Definitions and Legitimacy in the European Policy-Making 79
3.1.2.1 The Actors and their Relations: Horizontal Interactions between Policy-Makers 81
3.1.3 The Functional and Spatial Dimensions of Policy Networks 84
3.2 The European Microcosm for Learning: The Interreg Programmes 87
3.2.1 The Objective of Interreg: Policy Learning and Transfer between European Regions 88
3.2.2 The European Dimension: Implementing European Strategies through Projects 91
3.2.3 The Project Dimension: Inter-Regional Networks of Regional Policy-Makers 92
3.2.3.1 The 'Learning' Actors: Expert Networks of Regional Policy-Makers 93
3.2.3.2 The Mechanisms of Learning: 'Soft' Cooperation and Exchange 95
3.2.4 The Instruments of Policy Transfer: The Transfer of Knowledge on Regional Policies 97
3.2.4.1 Scanning Programmes: Benchmarking and Good Practice Identification 98

3.2.4.2 Drawing Lessons: Transferring Good Practices Between Regions 98
3.3 The Challenges to Learning in Interreg: Institutional Complexity and Spatial Distance 100
3.3.1 Transferring Regional Policies: Functional Complexity of the Lessons 101
3.3.2 Institutional and Cognitive Distance: Learning between Distanced Actors 104
3.3.3 Spatial Distance: Learning between Distanced and Diverse Regions 105
3.4 Summary: Network Governance in Inter-Regional "Micro-Europes" 107

4. Research Design and Methods: Qualitative Network Analysis of an In-Depth Case Study 110
4.1 Research Design: In-Depth Single Case Study of Interreg IVC Project "Know-Man" 110
4.2 Research Methods: Qualitative Network Analysis for Understanding Learning Processes 114
4.3 Data Collection: Mixed-Method Design for Understanding Cooperation and Learning 116
4.3.1 Building the Quantitative Fundament: Questionnaires and Visualisation 118
4.3.2 Bringing in the Qualitative Approach: Interviews and Document Analysis 121
4.4 Data Analysis: Qualitative Content Analysis and Visualisation of Cooperation 124

5. Interreg as Heterogeneous 'Micro-Europe': The Framework for Cooperation and Learning in "Know-Man" 127
5.1 The Heterogeneity within "Know-Man": Learning and Cooperation across Distances 129
5.1.1 The Framework of "Know-Man": Functional Network on Innovation Policy 129
5.1.1.1 From the Lisbon Strategy to "Know-Man": Supporting Innovation in Europe 130
5.1.1.2 "Know-Man" as Policy Network: Loosely Coupled Horizontal Interactions 132

5.1.2 The Regional-Structural Diversity: From Metropolitan to Rural Regions 134
5.1.3 The Institutional and Cognitive Diversity: Diverging Backgrounds of Actor Groups 139
5.1.3.1 The Institutional Diversity: From Public Authorities to Technology Parks 140
5.1.3.2 The Structural-Cognitive Diversity: Experiences and Motivations 142
5.2 The Cooperation Structures in "Know-Man": The Role of Proximity 144
5.2.1 The Development of the Project: A New and Atypical European Policy Network 145
5.2.1.1 Building of Inter-Regional Network Based on Strategies and Trust 146
5.2.2 The Implementation of the Project: Strong Regionality, Weak Inter-Regionality 148
5.2.2.1 Spatial Proximity Does Matter: Regional Islands of Cooperation 149
5.2.2.2 Bridging Institutional Distances: "Know-Man" as Temporary Platform 153
5.2.3 Summary: Joint Interest Temporary Bridges Distances 156

6. Heterogeneity and Lesson-Drawing: Learning for Overcoming Spatial and Institutional Distances 159
6.1 Preparing the Lesson-Drawing: Scanning Regional Innovation Programmes 161
6.1.1 Understanding the External Environment: Analysing Demand and Venturing Abroad 162
6.1.1.1 Analysing the Regional Framework through Surveys and Visualisations 163
6.1.1.2 Venturing Abroad: Experiencing the Regional Embedment through Study Visits 166
6.1.2 The Internal Reflection: Understanding Programmes through Model-Building 168
6.1.2.1 The Benchmarking Process: Explicit Knowledge and De-Contextualising 168

6.1.2.2 The Good Practices: Model-Building and Re-Contextualisation 170
6.1.3 Summary: Understanding the External Environment, before the Transfer 172
6.2 Supporting Methodology: Creation of Transfer Networks within "Know-Man" 174
6.3 The Inspiration of a Lesson: Overcoming Heterogeneity through Adaptation 175
6.3.1 The Homogeneous Case: Inspiration of two Spin Off Companies 176
6.3.1.1 The Framework for Learning: Two Approaches towards a Similar Programme 177
6.3.1.2 The Inspired Lesson: Learning on Complementarities and Extending Programmes 178
6.3.2 The Heterogeneous Case: Near-Failed Learning on Internationalisation Programme 180
6.3.2.1 The Framework for Learning: Similar Programmes but Too Diverse Regions 180
6.3.2.2 The Inspired Lesson: Inspiration for Re-Thinking Existing Regional Programme 182
6.3.3 Summary on Inspiration: Inspiration for Diminishing Spatial and Institutional Borders 183
6.4 The Mixture of a Lesson: Learning from the Experiences of Many 184
6.4.1 The Mixture of a Business Plan Competition: "Picking-and-Choosing" despite Diversity 185
6.4.1.1 The Framework for Mixing: Heterogeneous Programmes in Four Regions 185
6.4.2 The Mixed Lesson: Complementing Existing Programme with Best Elements 188
6.4.3 Summary of Mixture: Combining is Possible if Room for Manoeuvre Exists 190

6.5 The Emulation of a Lesson: Transferring European 'Best Practices' between Regions 191
6.5.1 The Heterogeneous Case: Transferring a Business Course despite Structural Diversity 192
6.5.1.1 The Framework for Learning: Learning between a Metropolitan and a Rural Region 193
6.5.1.2 The Emulated Lesson: Adaptation to New Regional Framework and Needs 195
6.5.1.3 The Sustainability of the Lesson: Policy Influence through Regional Anchoring 197
6.5.2 The Homogeneous Case: Transferring an Online Platform between Two Metropolises 199
6.5.2.1 The Framework for Learning: Two Metropolitan Regions with Similar Challenges 200
6.5.2.2 The Emulated Lesson: Regional Anchoring and Minor Adjustments needed 204
6.5.2.3 The Sustainability of the Lesson: Importance of Capacity and Willingness 204
6.5.3 Summary on the Emulations: Inter-Regional Impetus for Regional Lesson-Drawing 205
6.5.3.1 Creation of Spatial Proximity Needed for Overcoming Cognitive Hurdles 206
6.5.3.2 Inter-Regional Exchange as Booster for Regional Activity 207
6.5.3.3 Extended Implementation Networks as Regional Snowballs 209
6.6 The Failed Transfers: The Hurdle of Diversity for Inter-Regional Lesson-Drawing 210
6.7 Conclusions on Lesson-Drawing: The Importance of Preparation and Willingness 212
6.8 The Sustainability of Inter-Regional Cooperation and Learning 214
6.8.1 The Spatial Dimension: Temporal Inter-Regionality but Long-Term Regionality 215
6.8.2 Continuing Inter-Regional Cooperation Is Challenged by Spatial Distance 217

6.8.3 Lasting Effects on Regional Policies Based on Willingness and Capacities to Learn 219

7. Conclusions and Outlook: "The Micro-Integration of Europe" 224

7.1 The Role of Learning for Integration: Capturing Sub-National Integration Dynamics 225
7.2 Lesson-Drawing despite Heterogeneity: Functional Differentiation through Learning 229
7.3 Final Remarks: Inter-Regional Cooperation as Functional Micro-Integration 232

8. Annexes to the Dissertation 235

8.1 Data Collection: Exemplary Pre-Interview Network Questionnaire 235
8.2 Data Collection: Exemplary Guidelines for the Expert Interviews 236
8.3 Data Collection: Exemplary After-Know-Man Questionnaire 239
8.4 Data Sources: List of Documents and Citation Rules on the Case Study "Know-Man" 240
