

Table of Contents

Preface	1
-----------------------------	---

Chapter 1

Multi-ethnic Britain: statistics and policies

1.1. Demographics and statistics.....	5
1.1.1. Chinese population, gender division, and geographical distribution	5
1.1.2. Households and age distribution	7
1.1.3. Languages	8
1.1.4. Religion and self-identification	8
1.1.5. Education	9
1.1.6. Unemployment and employment patterns	9
1.2. UK immigration policies from 2008 to 2013.....	10
1.2.1. A points-based immigration system	10
1.2.2. Policy changes since 2011	12
1.3. Ethnic minority policies in Britain.....	17
1.3.1. Britain as a multicultural country	17
1.3.2. Multiculturalism as a state policy	18
1.3.3. Cameron's new integration policy	20

Chapter 2

Theoretical and methodological frameworks for transnational migration research

2.1. Theoretical development in migration studies: from methodological nationalism to transnationalism.....	27
2.1.1. Old theoretical framework for migration studies	27
2.1.2. The push-pull and the centre-periphery models	33
2.1.3. A new theoretical framework for migration studies	35

2.1.4. Transnationalism and its critiques	41
2.1.5. Transnationalism and denationalisation	48
2.1.6. Doing transnational migration research: issues to consider	51
2.2. Methodological shift in migration studies: from ethnic minority communities to transnational networks and hubs.....	56
2.2.1. Ethnic minority communities	56
2.2.2. Social networks	58
2.2.3. Social capital and embeddedness	63
2.2.4. Transnational networks and hubs	67
2.2.5. Transnational capital	68

Chapter 3

Gender and diasporic identities in transnational migration

3.1. Gender in transnational migration.....	71
3.1.1. Theorising gender, gender roles and relations	71
3.1.2. Female immigration to Britain: patterns and categories	78
3.1.3. Theoretical development on gender in migration studies	85
3.1.4. Re-examining gender and power relations in transnational migration	92
3.1.5. Deconstructing the traditional role of women in transnational families	97
3.2. Transnational migrants: diasporic yet cosmopolitan.....	99
3.2.1. Transnational nationalism: diaspora vs. nation-state?	99
3.2.2. Diasporic identities in contemporary transnational migration: from diasporic to cosmopolitan	105
3.2.3. The roles of women in transnational diasporas	109

Chapter 4

Methodology and research ethics

4.1. Ethnography as a research method.....	115
4.1.1. Studying and writing about cultures	115

4.1.2. Ethnography and its critiques	123
4.1.3. Ethnography as a research method in migration studies: from spatially-defined to multi-sited ethnography	127
4.2. Life story interviews.....	129
4.3. Research ethics.....	135
4.3.1. The UK Research Ethics Framework (REF)	135
4.3.2. Ethical issues concerning my project	136

Chapter 5

Ethnographic report: project design and findings

5.1. Contexts of my project.....	139
5.2. Design of my project.....	141
5.3. Locating the field.....	144
5.4. Reflections on my position as the researcher.....	152
5.5. Questions and issues addressed in the report.....	154
5.6. Transnational dimensions.....	155
5.6.1. Transnationalism from below	155
5.6.2. Transnationalism from above	167
5.6.3. Transnationalism, integration, and assimilation	181
5.7. Gender dimensions.....	198
5.7.1. Constructing and deconstructing the role of women in China	198
5.7.2. Chinese women in transnational migration	205
5.8. Diasporic dimensions.....	234
5.8.1. Chinese diasporic identities in transnational migration	234
5.8.2. Shifting in a continuum between diasporic and cosmopolitan identities	244

Conclusion	255
--------------------------------	-----

Appendix	259
------------------------------	-----

Bibliography	265
----------------------------------	-----