

TABLE OF CONTENTS

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS.....	10
INTRODUCTION	11

PART I

THE USE OF THE INDEFINITE MARKER ONE IN EPISODIC AND GENERIC CONTEXTS

INTRODUCTION.....	14
-------------------	----

CHAPTER 1

THE DEVELOPMENT OF ONE IN THE NOMINAL SYSTEM IN RUSSIAN AND BULGARIAN

1. Evolution of the indefinite article.....	15
2. The use of ONE in Russian and Bulgarian.....	17
2.1 The nominal system in Russian and Bulgarian	17
2.2 The development of the indefinite marker ONE in Russian	18
2.3 The development of the indefinite marker ONE in Bulgarian	22
3. Two kinds of Bulgarian indefinites	26
3.1 The debate in the literature	26
3.2 Bulgarian bare NPs and edin -NPs in comparison	29
3.2.1 Test 1: Scopal behaviour in intensional contexts	29
3.2.2 Test 2: Compatibility with wh -words.....	31
3.2.3 Test 3: Antecedents of discourse anaphora	33
3.2.4 Test 4: Clitic doubling	37
3.2.5 Test 5: Edin -insertion in non-referential predicative NPs	39
4. Summary.....	40

CHAPTER 2

EMPIRICAL STUDIES

1. Introduction	41
2. Establishing discourse referents	41
2.1 The novella corpus.....	41
2.2 The fairy tale corpus.....	44
3. Distribution of NPs in specific text types.....	47
3.1 The joke corpus	47
3.2 The proverb corpus.....	56
3.3 The aphorism corpus	59
4. Summary.....	62

CHAPTER 3

BULGARIAN INDEFINITES FROM A CROSSLINGUISTIC PERSPECTIVE

1. Discourse salience	64
2. Type vs. token distinction.....	66
3. Representation of indefinite readings within the DRT framework	68
3.1 Basic rules of DRT	68
3.2 Modelling of the interpretation of bare and ONE -indefinites in DRT	70
4. Summary.....	76

CHAPTER 4

EXPRESSION OF INDUCTIVE VS. NON-INDUCTIVE GENERICITY

1. Introduction	77
2. Genericity: Theoretical backgrounds.....	78
2.1 Basic distinction: Kind reference and characterizing sentences.....	78
2.2 Two types of generalizations: Inductive vs. non-inductive	79
2.2.1 The origins of distinction.....	79
2.2.2 Greenberg's (2003, 2006) approach	80
2.2.3 Krifka's (2009, 2012) approach	81
3. Expression of genericity in Bulgarian	83
3.1 Purpose of the investigation	83
3.2 The general pattern of coding genericity in Bulgarian	84
4. Expression of inductive vs. non-inductive generalizations	87
4.1 Discussion of data in Bulgarian.....	87
4.1.1 Marking of descriptive generics in nominal and verbal domains.....	87
4.1.2 Marking of definitional generics in nominal and verbal domains.....	89
4.2 Distinction between inductive and non-inductive genericity in Russian	94
4.3 Taking stock	96
5. Characteristics of inductive vs. non-inductive generalizations	98
5.1 Tolerating exceptions	98
5.2 Surprising generalizations	100
5.3 Rhetorical relations in discourse	102
6. Generic sequences	106
6.1 Characteristics of generic sequences	106
6.2 Generic sequences in comparison with descriptive and definitional generics	109
6.2.1 Test 1: Compatibility with habituality markers.....	109
6.2.2 Test 2: Transformation into past tense	110
6.2.3 Test 3: Interchangeability of perfective and imperfective aspect.....	112
7. Summary	113
CONCLUSION	114

PART II

RELATED FUNCTIONS OF THE NUMERAL AND INDEFINITE MARKER ONE

INTRODUCTION.....	115
-------------------	-----

CHAPTER 5

DIFFERENT MEANINGS OF ONE

1. Derived meanings of ONE	116
1.1 The meaning 'same'	116
1.2 The meaning 'one by one'	118
1.3 The meaning 'alone'	119
2. The restrictive function of ONE	121
2.1 Slavic languages	121
2.1.1 Russian	121
2.1.2 Polish	125
2.1.3 Bulgarian	126
2.1.4 Slovak	127
2.2 Non-Slavic languages	127
3. The intensifying function of ONE	129
3.1 Slavic languages	129
3.1.1 Bulgarian	129
3.1.2 Macedonian	135
3.1.3 Serbo-Croatian	136
3.1.4 Slovak	137
3.1.5 Polish	138
3.1.6 Upper Sorbian	139
3.2 Non-Slavic languages	139
3.2.1 Greek	139
3.2.2 Finnish	140
3.2.3 Gagauz and Turkish	140
3.2.4 French, Italian, Spanish	141
3.2.5 German and English	143
4. Summary	144

CHAPTER 6

ORIGINATION OF RELATED FUNCTIONS OF ONE

1. Semantic derivation of related uses of ONE	146
1.1 Singularity as a source of semantic derivation	146
1.2 Event-related singularity	147
1.3 Object-related singularity	147
1.4 Distribution-related singularity	149
1.5 Taking stock	151

2. Restrictive and intensifying ONE in comparison	152
2.1 Contexts with ONE for comparison.....	152
2.2 Syntactic position of ONE	152
2.3 Clause type	154
2.4 Use of emphatic particles	159
2.5 Evaluativity of the NP	160
2.6 Synonymic expressions	162
2.7 Results of comparison	165
3. Origination of restrictive and intensifying ONE	165
3.1 Basic remarks on restrictive focus elements	165
3.2 ONE as a focus-sensitive item	168
3.3 Scalar reading of ONE and intensification	169
3.4 ONE as a degree modifier	172
4. Metaphorical use of ONE and related issues	177
CONCLUSION	180
SUMMARY AND OUTLOOK.....	182
REFERENCES	185
SOURCES	197
LIST OF FIGURES AND GRAPHS.....	198
LIST OF TABLES	199