

Contents

Introduction — 1

1 Imaginative World-Making — 9

- 1.1 Imagine That ... — 9
- 1.2 Imagination in the Subjunctive Mood: From Mediation to Creation — 11
- 1.3 Imagination as a Shared Frame of Mind — 20
- 1.4 Bridging the Study of Imagination and Popular Imagination — 28
- 1.5 Literary Imagination — 33

2 The Imaginative Uses of Mimesis — 41

- 2.1 Mimesis as a Basis for Literature — 41
- 2.2 The Range of Mimesis: Literary Imagination as Real and Fantastic — 50
- 2.3 On the Interrelation between Mimesis and Genre — 62

3 Kinds of Unreliability — 78

- 3.1 From Mimesis to Deception — 78
- 3.2 Basic Features of Unreliability and How We Learn Them — 83
- 3.3 Narratorial and Focal Unreliability: A Scale of Intentionality — 88
- 3.4 Expositional and Combined: Exposition as Manipulation — 96

4 The Shaping of Literary Worlds — 110

- 4.1 The Imaginative Frame of Literary Imagination — 110
- 4.2 Literary World-Making: The Basics — 115
- 4.3 Modes and Themes — 121
- 4.4 Examples of Literary World-Making — 137

5 Key Combinations: Figures and Narratives — 150

- 5.1 Figures versus Narratives, Figures into Narratives — 150
- 5.2 From Metaphor to Narrative to Allegory — 160
- 5.3 Extended Metaphors in Novels — 168

6 Other Imaginative Inflections — 175

- 6.1 Indirection in Fiction and Drama — 176
- 6.2 Hypothetical Action in Poetry — 185
- 6.3 Genres and Text Types, Their Hierarchies and Blends — 198

7 How Literary Worlds Shape Us — 208

7.1 Imagined Selves and Communities in Fiction and Beyond — 208

7.2 Origins of the Modern Hero — 213

7.3 The Literary Spark for a World War (or Two) — 222

7.4 A Chinese Author at the Service of Ideology — 228

8 Why Literature Matters — 235

8.1 Benefit through Delight — 235

8.2 A Sense of Wonder — 242

9 Ten Reasons to Study and Teach Literary Worlds — 253

Conclusion — 267

Appendix 1 — 275

Appendix 2 — 276

Bibliography — 278

Primary Sources — 278

Secondary Sources — 285

Electronic Sources — 315

Index — 316