

Contents

I. Possible worlds	13
1. The notion of possible worlds	13
2. The qualities of possible worlds	16
3. Identification in possible worlds	17
3.1 Trans-world-identity (TWI)	18
3.1.1 Kripke's notion of transworld identity	19
3.1.2 Rescher's possible worlds and TWI	20
3.2 Counterpart theory	23
4. Possible worlds and the actual world	25
5. Possible worlds and truth values	30
5.1 Necessity and possibility	31
5.2 The accessibility-relation between possible worlds	31
6. Possible worlds and linguistics	31
6.1 Cresswell's possible worlds and natural language	33
7. Extension and intension	35
7.1 Basic logical terms	35
7.2 Gottlob Frege	36
7.3 Rudolf Carnap	37
7.4 Richard Montague	39
7.5 Saul Kripke	41
II. Fictional worlds as possible worlds	45
1. Preliminary motivations	45
2. Possible worlds of logic and fiction	46
2.1 Impossible worlds	49
3. Fictional worlds and the actual world	52
3.1 The accessibility relation	53

3.2	Fictional and historical counterparts.....	55
3.3	Finitude and completeness.....	56
4.	The structure of fictional worlds	57
4.1	Extensional and intensional structures of fictional worlds.....	59
4.2	Narrative modalities.....	64
4.3	Intensional functions	65
4.4	Authentication function	65
4.4.1	The principle of minimal departure	69
4.5	Saturation function	71
4.5.1	Fictional encyclopedia	73
4.6	Fictional and historical worlds	74
III.	Literary transduction.....	77
1.	General specification.....	77
2.	Intertextuality.....	81
3.	Transduction	83
3.1	Lubomír Doležel's view of intertextuality	83
3.2	Transduction and fictional worlds	84
3.3	Transduction as an alternative to intertextuality	85
IV.	The Prague School and fictional worlds	93
1.	Linguistics and aesthetics	93
2.	Literary theory	94
3.	Fictional worlds	98
Literature		103