

Contents

Chapter 1

Constructing the Public, its Opinion and its Media of Influence — 1

The Public and Public Culture in the High Middle Ages — 2

Public Opinion — 13

Propaganda — 22

Preaching as the Major Media for Communicating Propaganda and Influencing Opinion — 33

Chapter 2

The Peace of God and Growing Awareness of the “Public” — 48

Peace Councils and Attracting the Public — 49

Crowds and Greater Attention to the “People” — 62

Using the Interdict, Excommunication, and the Curse to Influence the Public — 73

Chapter 3

Investiture and Reform Appeal to the Populus — 80

Gregorian Reform — 84

Friendship Circles of the Twelfth Century and Expanding Political Influence — 101

Chapter 4

Heresy as the Public Challenge to Orthodoxy — 109

Chapter 5

Influence and Challenge: the Power of the Crusades in their Own Public Sphere — 142

The First Crusade — 143

The Second Crusade — 157

Innocent III and Crusading as the Center of the Public Sphere — 167

The Public Voice Questions the Value of Crusading — 187

Crusade Criticism and its Influence on Public Opinion and Public Culture — 188

Chapter 6

Broadening the Public Culture in the Later Middle Ages — 206

Public Opinion and Literature — 206

Physical Public Space as Medieval Public Sphere — 217

Chapter 7

Community, Representation, and the Populus in Practice and Theory — 238

Fama — 240

Quod omnes tangit ab omnibus approbetur and a Medieval Theory of Consent — 247

Theories of Representation — 251

Medieval Community, Representation and the Populus in Theory — 258

Marsilius of Padua and the Role of the People — 264

Chapter 8

Conclusion — 278

Abbreviations — 286

Bibliography — 287

Primary Sources — 287

Secondary Sources — 289

Index — 335