

Content

Foreword .....	6
Pre-history .....	9
Nothing happens without a cause because even new companies have their roots in historical experiences
The pre-Gardena period .....	21
A nameless sales agency begins in Nuremberg as a start-up company
Dr Eugen Trautwein: Market success out of nowhere .....	36
The wings are spread .....	39
New developments: from brand to enterprise, from trade company to manufacturer
The green revolution .....	51
Gardena gradually gains contours and slowly develops into a brand
Nils Staehler: The first article about Gardena .....	64
Product and brand .....	69
The Ulm School of Design and how Gardena benefits from its graduates
Manfred Maus: Even business trips can be helpful .....	84
Success and risk .....	87
In 1969 Gardena enters choppy waters following (too) rapid growth
System, system, system .....	99
The company continues to create further growth in a decade brimming with innovations
Ulm and the world .....	113
An impossible personality profile for a potential love affair with Swabians
Trade and customer .....	119
Gardena becomes a medium-sized company and discovers new challenges
Fundamental questions .....	129
Is Gardena still a medium-sized player or is it becoming a corporate group?

Frank Miedaner: Outstanding brand development.	140
Innovation as a driver.	143
New products and technologies are essential for Gardena's survival – especially in times of change
External manufacturing	153
The role of external manufacturing operations at workshops for the disabled and prisons
Prof Dr Guido Quelle: Contours, clarity and consistency	160
Gardena grows	163
The end of the century sees an explosion of the gardening market, creating new challenges
Claudia Rivinius: Pick me up and buy me!	178
A slow change	181
The Gardena brand becomes ever more important; at the same time a generational shift is in the air
Trials and tribulations.	191
A somewhat painful process – the two founder families part ways
Bernd Werner: Gardens “on the brain”	202
The transition phase	205
Costs down, returns up – financial investor Industri Kapital tighten the reins
Klaus Peter Teipel: The garden is robust	214
„One Husqvarna“	219
Gardena now belongs to a competitor. Which will prevail – the risks or the opportunities?
We're back!	231
Gardena becomes one of Husqvarna's core areas and gains tremendously in importance
Johannes Welsch: The garden is on trend	246
Beyond the horizon	249
As star brand, Gardena wants to have a hand in its future – with confidence and innovative strength	