

Contents

Translators' Introduction ix

Preface xiii

Introduction 1

Choice of subject matter 1

New conformism 2

False musical consciousness 4

'Intellectualism' 7

Modern music unprotected 10

The antinomy of modern music 12

Growing indifferentism 13

On method 16

Schoenberg and Progress 19

Disturbance of the work 19

Inherent tendency of musical material 21

Schoenberg's criticism of illusion and play 24

Dialectics of loneliness 27

Loneliness as style 30

Expressionism as objectivity 32

Total organization of the elements of music 34

Total development 36

The concept of twelve-tone technique 41

Musical domination of nature 43

Loss of freedom 45

Twelve-tone melos and rhythm 48

Differentiation and coarsening 52

Harmony 54

Instrumental timbre 59

Twelve-tone counterpoint 61

Function of counterpoint	65
Form	66
The composers	72
Avant-garde and theory	78
The renunciation of material	82
Cognitive character	87
Attitude towards society	91

Stravinsky and Restoration 95

Authenticity	95
Sacrifice and the absence of intention	97
The hand organ as a primeval phenomenon	100
Sacre and African sculpture	101
Technical elements in Sacre	103
'Rhythm'	106
Identification with the collective	108
Archaism, modernism, infantilism	110
Permanent regression and musical form	114
The psychotic aspect	116
Ritual	117
Alienation as objectivity	118
Fetishism of the means	119
Depersonalization	120
Hebephrenia	121
Catatonia	123
Music about music	125
Denaturation and simplification	127
Dissociation of time	129
Music – a pseudomorphism of painting	132
Theory of ballet music	133
Modes of listening	135
The deception of objectivism	138
The final trick	139
Neoclassicism	142
Experiments in expansion	144
Schoenberg and Stravinsky	146

Note to the Third Edition 151

Notes	153
Index	177