

Contents

Note on Sources, Abbreviations, and Translations — XI

Acknowledgements — XV

Introduction — 1

A Prospectus of the Argument — 6

Part I Obligatory Ends, Material Practical Principles, and Practical Law in Kant's Doctrine of Morals — 13

Chapter 1

Reason's Lawgiving and Obligatory Ends in the Metaphysics of Morals — 15

§ 1 Laws of Freedom, Ethical Lawgiving, and the Systematic Division between Kant's Doctrines of Right and Virtue — 15

§ 2 Obligatory Ends, the End in Itself, and Laws for Maxims of Actions — 21

§ 3 Own-Perfection and Others' Happiness as Intrinsically Obligatory Ends — 26

§ 4 Laws for Maxims and the "Dualism" of Morally Practical Reason — 31

Chapter 2

Obligatory Ends and the Grounding of Maxims: A Key Problem in Kant's Moral Doctrine of Ends — 35

§ 1 Laws for Maxims of Ends and Empirical Grounds of Maxims — 35

§ 2 Duty, Self-Constraint, and Objectively Necessary Ends — 38

§ 3 Ends of Action and the Grounding of Maxims — 41

§ 4 Material Determining Grounds, the Matter of Universal Laws, and Self-Seeking Ends — 47

§ 5 Self-Seeking Ends, Own-Happiness, and Universal Lawgiving — 49

Chapter 3

The Principle of Self-Love and Material Practical Principles in the Critique of Practical Reason — 51

§ 1 Practical Propositions, Maxims, and Practical Laws — 51

§ 2 Self-Love and Material Practical Principles in Kant's Theorems of Practical Reason — 52

§ 3 Own-Happiness, Others' Happiness, and Material Conditions of Maxims — 63

§ 4 Maxims, Practical Laws, and Universal Happiness — 69

§ 5 A Question of Practical Anthropology? — 72

Part II Moral Worth and Motivation in Kant and Hume — 79

Chapter 4

Eudaimonistic Etiology, Own-Perfection, and Moral Worth — 81

§ 1 Eudaimonistic Etiology and the Happiness of Others — 81

§ 2 Own-Perfection and Moral Worth — 85

§ 3 Hume's "Undoubted Maxim" and the Sentimentalist Conception of Actions' Moral Worth — 92

Chapter 5

Moral Worth and Motivation in Kant's Criticism of Sentimentalist Ethics — 97

§ 1 Squire Allworthy's Inclinations and the Moral Worth of Actions in Kant's Groundwork for the Metaphysics of Morals — 97

§ 2 Kant's Anti-Sentimentalist Difficulty with Allworthy-Type Actions — 105

§ 3 Acting from Respect for Law and the Problems of Prescriptive Regress and Nomothetic Circularity — 111

§ 4 Dealing with the 'Elephant in the Room': Respect for Law as an Incentive for Action — 114

Part III Kant's Juridical Theory of Right and the Foundations of Property Law — 123

Chapter 6

Original Community, Possession, and Acquisition in Kant's Doctrine of Right — 129

§ 1 Intelligible Possession and the Juridical Postulate of Practical Reason — 129

§ 2 Acquisition, Occupation, and Original Community — 135

§ 3 Original Community and Universal Possession — 142

Chapter 7

Original Acquisition in Kant, Grotius, and Selden — 149

§ 1 Dominium, Right, and the Reach of the Cannons — 149

§ 2 Original Community, Prima Occupatio, and the Right to All Things — 150

§ 3 Kantian Original Acquisition and Material Equality in Distribution — 160

Part IV Placing Kant in his History of Moral Philosophy — 171

Chapter 8

Kant's Classification of Material Principles of Morality in the Critique of Practical Reason — 172

- § 1 Epicurus, the Stoics, and “Practical Material Determining Grounds” — 172
- § 2 Hutcheson, Moral Feeling, and Benevolent Inclination — 176
- § 3 Material Determining Grounds and Stoic Internal Perfection — 180

Chapter 9

Hutcheson and Rousseau in the Development of Kant's Doctrine of Morals — 184

- § 1 “Hutcheson and others”, Material Principles of Obligation, and Moral Feeling in 1764 — 185
- § 2 Moral Feeling and Universal Will in Kant's 1760s Ethics — 190
- § 3 The Idea of Universal Lawgiving and Rousseau's Anthropology — 195
- § 4 Rousseau, Self-Love, and the “One-Source View” of Stoic Oikeiôsis — 197

Chapter 10

Sentimentalist Ethics and Natural Law — 206

- § 1 Benevolent Inclination and Law in Hutcheson's Account of the Origin of Obligation — 206
- § 2 Cumberland and Pufendorf in Light of Hutcheson's Criticism — 213
- § 3 “Kick Not Against the Pricks”: Pufendorf and Hobbes on Natural Obligation — 224
- § 4 Benevolent Inclination and Reason's Lawgiving Function: Kant and Hutcheson as Mirror-Image Counterparts — 235

Chapter 11

Kant and the Role of the Honestum in Sentimentalist and Rationalist Ethics — 240

- § 1 Retrospectus and Hume's Puzzling Letter to Hutcheson — 240
- § 2 Cicero's “Proof against the Stoics” and Hume's Undoubted Maxim — 244
- § 3 The Idea of the Honestum and Cicero's “Proof against the Stoics” in De finibus IV — 249
- § 4 The Value of the Honestum in Reid's Repudiation of Hume's Undoubted Maxim — 256

- § 5 The Form of the Honestum and Hutcheson's Account of Obligation — 262
- § 6 Kant's Theory of Reason's Autonomy and the Historic Impasse that Need
Never Have Been — 267

Chapter 12 Natural Right, Material Equality, and the Normative Basis of Acquisition — 272

- § 1 Ius Utendi, Ius Appropriandi, and the Emergence of the Modern Conception of Natural Right: Grotius and Ockham on Original
Acquisition — 273
- § 2 The Right to All Things and Communitas Rerum: Hobbes on the Conceptual Incoherence of Natural Right-Based Acquisition — 279
- § 3 Original Acquisition and the Formal Principle of Material Equality in Distribution: Kant's Surprising Affinity with Both Ockham and Hobbes — 289

Conclusion — 294

Kantian Consequentialism, Equal Right, and a Marxian Principle of Distributive Justice — 294

- § 1 Consequentialism in Ethics and Kant's Obligatory Ends — 294
- § 2 Equal Right, Material Equality, and Marx's Twofold Principle — 306

Bibliography — 322

Primary Sources — 322

Secondary Literature — 325

Translations: Individual Works and Editions Containing
Translations — 340

Index — 343