

Contents

1	Introducing dying	1
1.1	Introduction	1
1.2	Literature on dying	5
1.3	Theoretical framework.	20
1.4	Coming to terms: Definitions	25
1.5	Main arguments and structure of the chapters.	31
2	Fieldwork with dying persons	35
2.1	Research context	35
2.2	Research participants	39
2.3	Methodology	45
2.4	Research ethics and personal reflections	54
2.5	Fieldwork in the native culture and contrast research	63
2.6	Summary: Reflections on fieldwork with dying persons.	68
3	Becoming dying	71
3.1	The beginning of the end.	71
3.2	How dying starts	78
3.3	Dying as a vital conjuncture	90
3.4	Summary: Becoming pre-exitally dying in Germany	96
4	First experiences as a dying person	99
4.1	Decision-making processes: Where and how to die	99
4.2	Dying at home: An ambivalent ideal	103
4.3	Decisions, requested and revised.	107
4.4	Institutions – gaining attractiveness.	111
4.5	Stressful movements	116
4.6	Summary: Shaping the first time of dying.	121

XI

5	Cultural models of dying	123
5.1	Introducing cultural models	123
5.2	Dying 'well': Approaching an ideal	126
5.3	The umbrella model: Dying in dignity	132
5.4	Cultural models of dying: Autonomy and serenity	133
5.5	Summary: Cultural models of dying in Germany	152
6	How it feels to be a dying person	153
6.1	Feeling to be different from non-dying ones	154
6.2	Feeling right: Display and concealment of emotions	160
6.3	Fun and humor	162
6.4	Envy and jealousy	167
6.5	Simultaneity of emotions	171
6.6	Summary: What dying feels like	178
7	Changing perceptions in dying	181
7.1	Changing sensory perceptions	182
7.2	"...these drugs do me so much good": Medication and technical devices	189
7.3	Changing perceptions of relevance	193
7.4	Regrets, achievements, and the triumph of having no family	197
7.5	Summary: Physical, evaluative and relevance-related perceptions	200
8	Emic perspectives on the course of dying	203
8.1	Figuring out reasons for dying	203
8.2	Temporalities of dying	208
8.3	Ending dying	213
8.4	Cornelia's last hours	219
8.5	Summary: Reflections on the course of dying	221
9	Dying as liminality in the making	223
9.1	Dying – a liminal situation?	224
9.2	Lack and production of liminal guidance	228
9.3	Emerging options for communitas	235
9.4	Historical conditions of emerging liminality in dying	241
9.5	Summary: Dying as liminality in the making	243

Contents	XIII
10 Insights from and for dying	245
10.1 Main findings	245
10.2 Theoretical contributions	250
10.3 Practical inspirations	253
11 Epilogue	257
Reference list	259