

Contents

1	Introduction	1
2	International Law, Globalization, and Transformation	7
2.1	International Law and Globalization	7
2.1.1	Globalization, Sovereignty and Changing Structures	9
2.1.1.1	Rise of Network Society	10
2.1.1.2	Erosion of Sovereignty	15
2.1.2	Challenges of Globalization towards International Law	20
2.1.2.1	Dimension of Transformation: From Westphalian towards Post-Westphalian	20
2.1.2.1.1	New Law for a New World	20
2.1.2.1.2	From “Law of Cooperation” towards “Law of Integration”	23
2.1.2.2	Expansion of International Community	29
2.1.2.2.1	International Organizations and Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs)	29
2.1.2.2.2	Individuals and Impact of Human Rights	35
2.1.2.3	A New Normative Framework	38
2.1.2.4	Fragmentation and International Law	43
2.1.2.4.1	Increasing Differentiation and Fragmentation	43
2.1.2.4.2	New Spaces, Regimes and Jurisdictional Rules	47
2.1.2.5	Blurring Borderline Between Public and Private Law	49
2.1.2.6	Paradigm Shifts	51
2.1.2.6.1	Earlier Shifts: International Community	52
2.1.2.6.2	Post-War Shifts	55
2.2	Responses to the Transformation: An Inquiry for a New Paradigm?	58
2.2.1	The Rise of the Idea of Global Law	59
2.2.2	Global Law and Constructivism	62
2.2.3	A Global Public Order? A Genealogy of Pluralism, Administrative Law and Constitutionalism	64

2.2.3.1	Global Legal Pluralism	65
2.2.3.2	Global Administrative Law	66
2.2.3.3	Global Constitutionalism	69
3	Constitutionalism in Global Context: A Developing Discourse	73
3.1	Mapping Global Constitutionalism Theories.	74
3.1.1	Global Constitutionalist Theories: Assumption of an Ongoing Constitutionalization Process.	75
3.1.1.1	Holistic Approaches: World State, Cosmopolitanism, Universalism	75
3.1.1.1.1	Cosmopolitanism and “the World State” . . .	75
3.1.1.1.1.1	Kantian Tradition and Cosmopolitanism	76
3.1.1.1.1.2	The Idea of “World State”	81
3.1.1.1.2	The UN Charter as a Constitution.	86
3.1.1.1.3	Constitutionalization of the WTO.	91
3.1.1.2	Micro-Constitutionalization	94
3.1.1.2.1	World Society and Constitutions as Structural Couplings of Law and Politics . . .	94
3.1.1.2.2	Teubner and Fischer-Lescano: Constitutional Fragments	98
3.1.1.3	Compensatory Constitutionalism	103
3.1.2	Global Constitutionalism as a “Noetic” Idea.	106
3.2	Viability of Global Constitutionalism	108
3.2.1	Responses and Challenges to Global Constitutionalism	109
3.2.1.1	“Unrealistic” Perspective of Global Constitutionalism	109
3.2.1.2	“Flaws” of Global Constitutionalism	111
3.2.2	Interrogation for Viability of Global Constitutionalism	115
3.2.2.1	Commonalities of Global Constitutionalism Theories.	115
3.2.2.2	What Does the Global Constitutionalism Discourse Lack?	116
4	Meaning of Contemporary Constitution	121
4.1	Key Concepts.	121
4.1.1	The Main Idea of Contemporary Constitution and Constitutionalism.	121
4.1.1.1	Historical Development of Modern Constitution and Constitutionalism	127
4.1.1.1.1	Pre-modern Developments	127
4.1.1.1.2	Rise of Modern Constitutionalism	132
4.1.1.2	Identification of Constitution: Discursive Facts	136
4.1.1.2.1	Traditional Idea of Constitution: Analytical Interpretation of Constitution	138

4.1.1.2.2	Constitutions in Context: The Dichotomy of Political Constitution and Legal Constitution	142
4.1.1.2.2.1	Legal Constitution	145
4.1.1.2.2.1.1	Theoretical Background.	145
4.1.1.2.2.1.2	German Basic Law (Grundgesetz) as a Legal Constitution	150
4.1.1.2.2.2	Political Constitution	153
4.1.1.2.2.2.1	Theoretical Background.	153
4.1.1.2.2.2.2	The Human Rights Act and the British Constitution	161
4.1.1.2.2.3	Contextual Identity of Constitution	166
4.2	Contemporary Constitutionalism and Globalization	172
4.2.1	Relationship and Communication Between Constitutions	172
4.2.1.1	Migration of Constitutions and Contemporary Constitution as a Mobile Phenomenon	172
4.2.1.2	Contemporary Constitution and Transconstitutionalism	178
4.2.2	Changing Framework of Legitimacy	181
4.2.2.1	Transformation of Constituent Power.	181
4.2.2.2	Contemporary Constitution as Increasingly a Rights-based Concept	185
4.2.3	Contemporary Constitutionalism and Integration	186
4.2.3.1	Integrative Power of Modern Constitutions	186
4.2.3.2	Changing Face of Integrative Function.	189
4.2.4	Meaning of Contemporary Constitution	194
4.2.4.1	A Deviation or a Continuance of Modern Constitution?	194
4.2.4.2	Typology Problem.	195
4.2.4.3	A New Paradigm to Explain Diversity and Relativity of Constitutions.	198
5	Contemporary Constitution and the Cultural Paradigm	209
5.1	Constitution as a Cultural Phenomenon.	209
5.1.1	Cultural Paradigm and the Concept of Constitutional Culture	209
5.1.2	Constitutional Culture as a Reflection of Political and Civic Culture	212
5.1.2.1	Constitutional Culture as a Political Culture	212

5.1.2.2	Constitutional Cultures Between Political Decisions and Social Discourses: Theory of Richard Münch . . .	216
5.1.3	Constitutional Culture as a Variation of Legal Culture	218
5.1.3.1	The Idea of Legal Culture	218
5.1.3.2	Constitutional Culture as Legal Culture	223
5.2	Reflections on Constitutional Culture	228
5.2.1	Constitutional Cultures in Territorial Basis	228
5.2.1.1	The British Constitutional Culture	229
5.2.1.2	The German Constitutional Culture	231
5.2.1.3	The American Constitutional Culture	233
5.2.2	Constitutional Culture in Context: Case of Human Rights . .	235
5.2.3	Cultural Identity of Constitution	240
6	Contemporary Constitutionalism to Understand Global Constitutionalism	243
6.1	Global Constitutionalism and the Narrower Meaning of Constitution	243
6.1.1	Global Constitutionalism from the Point of ‘Achieved Constitutions of the Past’	243
6.1.2	Some Further Aspects of Modern Constitutionalism: Integration, Unity, Separation of Powers	246
6.1.3	Fragmented Global Order: A Proto-Constitutional Order? . .	250
6.2	Global Constitutionalism from the Point of the Cultural Paradigm .	251
6.2.1	Prospects for a Global Constitutional Culture	252
6.2.1.1	Global Constitutional Culture as a Global Legal Culture.	253
6.2.1.1.1	Global Internal Legal Culture	254
6.2.1.1.2	Global External Legal Culture	259
6.2.1.2	Global Constitutional Culture as a Global Political Culture.	268
6.2.1.2.1	Post-Westphalian Values and Consensus . .	269
6.2.1.2.2	Global Constitutional Culture and Legitimacy	274
6.2.1.2.3	A Global Rule of Law?	275
6.2.2	Global Constitutionalism and Constitutional Culture	281
6.3	Prospects for the Future of Global Constitutionalism	284
6.3.1	Global Constitutionalism as a Matter of Transconstitutional Relations	285
6.3.2	Global Constitution as a Metonym	289
7	Conclusion	293
	Bibliography	299