

Contents

1 Introduction	1
2 Epistemic Aims of School Education	9
2.1 Epistemic Aims of School Education	10
2.1.1 Acquiring Epistemic Goods	11
2.1.2 Becoming a Skilled Thinker	13
2.2 Educating for Intellectual Character Growth	15
2.2.1 The Concept of Intellectual Virtues	16
2.2.2 Teaching Intellectual Virtues at School	20
2.2.3 Two Objections to Intellectual Character Formation at School	21
2.3 Conclusion	25
3 Central Characteristics of a Good Teacher-Student Relationship	27
3.1 The Inherently Relational Character of School Education	27
3.2 The Concept of a Good Teacher-Student Relationship	30
3.2.1 Characteristics of a Good Teacher-Student Relationship	31
3.2.2 Relationship Goods in the Teacher-Student Relationship	32
3.3 Four Objections	36
3.3.1 Doubts about the Dyadic and Personal Character of the Teacher-Student Relationship	36
3.3.2 Asymmetries in the Educational Relationship	38
3.3.3 Functionality and Efficacy instead of Relationship Goods	39
3.3.4 Relationship Goods in a Professional Role-Relationship?	40
3.4 Conclusion	43
4 Care in the Teacher-Student Relationship	45
4.1 The Concept of Care and its Application to the Teacher-Student Relationship	46

4.1.1	Caring for the Student's Needs	46
4.1.2	Caring Attitudes and Caring Actions	50
4.1.3	The Reciprocity of Care in School Education	53
4.2	The Role of Care in Epistemic Education	55
4.2.1	Creating a Good and Caring Learning Environment	55
4.2.2	Care and Intellectual Character Education	57
4.3	Responding to Two Objections	59
4.3.1	Does the Concept of Care Ask too Much of the Teacher?	60
4.3.2	Should Teacher and Student Cultivate Pedagogical Love instead of Care?	61
5	Trust in the Teacher-Student Relationship	65
5.1	Trust Between Teacher and Student	65
5.1.1	Analysing the Trust-Relationship between Teacher and Student	66
5.1.2	The Teacher's Trust in the Student	71
5.2	The Role of Trust in Epistemic Education	73
5.2.1	Trust and the Student's Acquisition of Knowledge from the Teacher's Testimony	74
5.2.2	Trust and the Student's Development of Epistemic Confidence	78
5.3	Conclusion	81
6	Excursus on the Final Value of a Good Teacher-Student Relationship	83
6.1	An Important Objection to my Account	84
6.2	Responding to the Objection	87
6.2.1	The Final Value of a Good Teacher-Student Relationship	87
6.2.2	Defending my Account	90
7	Tying Up Loose Ends and Considering Implications for Practice	91
7.1	The Normative Nature of the Proposed Concept	91
7.2	The Same Relationship Goods for All Students?	94
7.3	Outlook: Implications for Practice	96
7.3.1	Putting the Relationship Centre Stage	97
7.3.2	Adapting the Institutional Structures	98
7.3.3	Support and Assistance for the Teachers	100
7.4	A Plea for Ideal Theorising	102
	References	105