

Contents

Acknowledgements — VII

Lydia Schumacher

Early Thirteenth-Century English Franciscan Thought — 1

Michael J.P. Robson

The Network of Franciscan Schools in England: From the Local scholae to the studia generalia — 23

Giles Gasper

How to Teach the Franciscans: Robert Grosseteste and the Oxford Community of Franciscans c.1229–35 — 57

Aaron Gies

Medieval Images of Alexander of Hales — 77

Cecilia Panti

Adam Rufus of Exeter, Master and Minor (d. 1234): A State of the Art — 93

Emilie Lavallée

Lights in the Darkness: Counsel, Deliberation, and Illumination in the Letters of Adam Marsh — 127

Neil Lewis

The Problem of the Unicity of Truth in the Early Oxford Franciscan School — 149

Rega Wood and Zita V. Toth

Nec idem nec aliud: The Powers of the Soul and the Origins of the Formal Distinction — 171

Zita V. Toth

‘They Tend into Nothing by Their Own Nature’: Rufus and an Anonymous De Generatione Commentary on the Principles of Corruptibility — 199

Fiorella Retucci

Intersecting Wisdom: Thomas of York and His Sources — 221

VI — Contents

Sophie Delmas

Bartholomew the Englishman, ‘Master of the Properties of Things’: Between Exegesis and Preaching — 243

Nicola Polloni

Disentangling Roger Bacon’s Criticism of Medieval Translations — 261

José Filipe Silva

John Pecham’s Theory of Natural Cognition: Perception — 283

Riccardo Saccenti

The Form of the Body: John Pecham’s Critique of Aquinas’ Doctrine of the Soul and the Summa Halensis — 311

Contributor Biographies — 327

Index — 331