

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	4
Foreword	9
Introduction	16

CHAPTER ONE

FROM NATURALISM TO THE ASCENDENCY OF ART DECO (1895–1932) 23

Caldas da Rainha: the leading ceramic centre in Portugal	24
Manuel Cipriano Gomes, known as Mafra: the original innovator	25
Rafael Bordalo Pinheiro: from brilliant artist to “simply a labourer”	26
The 2nd Viscount of Sacavém and the Austrian Joseph Füller	30
Gustavo Bordalo Pinheiro: a more than capable “follower”	31
Costa Mota Sobrinho: the cosmopolitan sculptor	33
Art Nouveau in Portugal: a tiled affair	35
Raul Lino and the (almost) total work of art	37
Neo-Manueline and other revivalisms	40
Art Deco triumphs; the example of Vista Alegre	41
Foreign docents in Portugal: Leopoldo Battistini and the smaller potteries	44
Three international sculptors and ceramic designers	46
Canto da Maya at Boulogne-sur-Seine	47
Donald Gilbert: an Englishman at Sacavém	49
João da Silva at Vista Alegre and Rosenthal	50

CHAPTER TWO

STUDIO POTTERY REVIVAL (1933–1949) 53

António Ferro and the secretariat for propaganda and culture of Estado Novo	54
The Política do Espírito , or Politics of the Soul	57
Italy as a source of inspiration	59
The rebirth of studio pottery and its two pioneers	60
Jorge Barradas: baroque and decorative	61
Hein Semke: “too modern and too austere”	65
From small potteries to ceramic schools	69
Clay handicrafts and figurado from Barcelos: their impact	69
The whimsical world of Rosa Ramalho, Ana Baraça and Mistério	70
Visual artists and traditional potteries	73

The Olaria de Alcobaça, Lda.: a rare exception	74
Ceramic schools: from Viana do Alentejo to Lisbon and Porto	75
The Fragosos's private ceramic school	77
Art exhibitions: promoted by the regime and the opposition	79
Fourteen "modern art" exhibitions (1935–1951)	79
Ten E.G.A.P. exhibitions (1946–1956) and the Neorealist movement	80
The first (and only) national salon of decorative arts (1949)	84
CHAPTER THREE
UNPRECEDENTED FLAIR (1950–1974)	87
The S.N.I. awards	88
Justified and missed opportunities: the ceramic awards (1949–1965)	89
Five exhibitions of "modern ceramics" (1949–1957)	92
Seven Novíssimos salons (1959–1965)	95
Four national art salons (1966–1969) and a single national award for ceramics	98
Clay and visual artists	99
Two paramount artist-ceramicists	103
The painter Júlio Pomar	103
The sculptor Jorge Vieira	105
The Fundação Calouste Gulbenkian grants	108
Occasional influences: CoBrA, Surrealism, Abstractionism, Brutalism and the great masters	111
Ceramic art: the three reference factories	113
Viúva Lamego: a venerable Lisbon institution	114
Querubim Lapa: humour, talent and technique in equal measure	116
SECLA: ambition and artistic vitality at Caldas da Rainha	118
Hansi Staël: design and folk ideas reinterpreted	119
The unconventional life and work of Luís Ferreira da Silva	120
Campos & Filhos: porcelain-type body and stoneware made in Viana do Castelo	124
António Pedro: surrealist ceramics and "the conquest of the impossible"	126
Further factories: their employees and ad hoc collaborations	132
The pottery of Joaquim Duarte & Filhos, Lisbon	137
Potteries and small factories: their growing interest for design and one-of-a-kind ceramics	137
Jorge de Almeida Monteiro and his Cerâmica Bombarralense, Lda.	138
The Cerâmica Artística e Industrial, Lda. and "Romeu Ceramista"	138
José Franco, a traditional potter with an interest in contemporary forms	139
Colourful studio pottery by Carlos Vizeu	139
Building up momentum: state, Catholic Church and private commissions	140

CHAPTER FOUR
CHALLENGING TIMES FOR STUDIO POTTERY (1975–2005)	147
Age of revolutions	148
Local museums and three-dimensional ceramics	148
Established ceramicists and their regained vitality	150
Artur José: who “became an artist while making ceramics”	152
Mário Ferreira da Silva, the stoneware devotee	153
Martins Alves, Marcelino Gordillo and the new ceramic workshops	155
African connections: the case of Mozambique	157
The menagerie and postmodern vessels of Jorge Mealha	159
Inácio Matsinhe and Heitor Pais: between Mozambique and Portugal	160
European connections: ceramicists living and working abroad	160
The lively and fearless creatures of Bela Silva	162
Contemporary visual artists: a perennial attraction for clay?	163
Towards the new millennium	165
THE PEDRO MOURA CARVALHO COLLECTION
TWENTIETH-CENTURY CERAMIC ART FROM PORTUGAL (1895–2005)	169
Bibliography	310
Index	319