

Table of Contents

|                                                              |        |
|--------------------------------------------------------------|--------|
| Preface .....                                                | V      |
| Abbreviations .....                                          | XI     |
| Chapter 1: Introduction .....                            | 1  |
| A. Topic and goal of the study .....                  | 1      |
| B. Research problem .....                             | 1      |
| C. Hypothesis .....                                   | 3      |
| D. Background .....                                   | 4      |
| E. Why Land, Jerusalem, and Temple? .....             | 7      |
| F. Why Philo? .....                                   | 11     |
| G. Paul and Philo on politics and power .....         | 17     |
| I. Philo's politics .....                                    | 18     |
| II. Paul's politics .....                                    | 21     |
| III. Paul and Philo on power .....                           | 23     |
| H. Paul's ἐκκλησία and Philo's synagogue .....        | 28     |
| I. Methodology .....                                  | 31     |
| J. Outline of Study .....                             | 35     |
| Chapter 2: Paul on the Land, Jerusalem, and Temple ..... | 37 |
| A. Introduction .....                                 | 37     |

|                                                                                                                |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| I. The relationship between the Land, Jerusalem, and Temple .....                                              | 38  |
| II. 1 Cor 3:5–4:5 .....                                                                                        | 39  |
| III. Rom 15 .....                                                                                              | 40  |
| IV. Gal 4:21–5:1 .....                                                                                         | 41  |
| V. The politics of the Land, Jerusalem, and Temple .....                                                       | 42  |
| B. The Land .....                                                                                       | 44  |
| I. W.D. Davies and Paul's Christological interpretation of the Land .....                                      | 45  |
| II. M. Forman and Paul's this-worldly interpretation of inheritancein Romans .....                         | 45  |
| III. E. McCaulley and sharing in the Son's inheritance in Galatians .....                                      | 50  |
| IV. The challenge to the Pauline "expansion of the land" perspective .....                                     | 53  |
| V. Israel's restoration and the Land in 1 Cor 1–4 .....                                                        | 59  |
| 1. Israel's restoration in 1 Cor 1–4 .....                                                                     | 63  |
| 2. The content of "what God has prepared for those who love him"(1 Cor 2:9) .....                          | 65  |
| 3. The background of "what no eye has seen, nor ear heard, nor thehuman heart conceived" (1 Cor 2:9) ..... | 70  |
| 4. The political aspects of Paul's rhetoric in 1 Cor 1–4 .....                                                 | 77  |
| VI. Conclusion .....                                                                                           | 82  |
| C. Jerusalem .....                                                                                      | 84  |
| I. Jerusalem and the Temple .....                                                                              | 85  |
| II. Paul's ambivalent relationship to Jerusalem .....                                                          | 86  |
| III. Paul's refusal to disassociate himself from Jerusalem .....                                               | 87  |
| 1. Paul's relationship to the Jerusalem church .....                                                           | 87  |
| 2. Paul's Jerusalem Collection .....                                                                           | 92  |
| 3. Jerusalem in Paul's eschatological expectation .....                                                        | 99  |
| IV. Paul's authority not dependent on Jerusalem .....                                                          | 102 |
| 1. Galatians 4:21–5:1 in recent interpretation .....                                                           | 105 |
| 2. 'Jerusalem above' and the hope of restoration .....                                                         | 110 |
| 3. 'Jerusalem above' and heavenly citizenship .....                                                            | 112 |
| 4. 'Jerusalem above' as mother .....                                                                           | 113 |
| V. Paul and the politics of Jerusalem .....                                                                    | 114 |
| VI. Conclusion .....                                                                                           | 116 |
| D. The Temple .....                                                                                     | 117 |
| I. Paul and the Temple from H. Wenschkewitz to M. Suh .....                                                    | 119 |
| II. The source domain for Paul's Temple metaphor .....                                                         | 124 |
| III. The Temple in 1 Cor 3:5–4:5 .....                                                                         | 126 |
| IV. The Temple and authority in 1 Cor 3:5–4:5 .....                                                            | 129 |

|                                                                                         |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| V. The Temple community and judgement in 1 Cor 1–4 .....                                | 136 |
| VI. The Spirit and authority in 1 Cor 1–4 .....                                         | 139 |
| VII. The Temple community in 1 Cor 5–6 .....                                            | 143 |
| VIII. Conclusion .....                                                                  | 146 |
| E. Conclusion .....                                                              | 146 |
| Chapter 3: Philo on the Land, Jerusalem, and Temple .....                           | 149 |
| A. Introduction .....                                                            | 149 |
| I. Philo's place in Second Temple Judaism .....                                         | 151 |
| II. Philo's exegesis .....                                                              | 153 |
| B. The Land .....                                                                | 159 |
| I. The Land in Philonic scholarship .....                                               | 159 |
| II. The Land as cosmos and the sovereignty of the wise .....                            | 165 |
| 1. The Land as cosmos through Stoic cosmopolitanism .....                               | 167 |
| 2. The Levitical priests who have no Land but only God as their"inheritance" .....  | 174 |
| III. The Land in Philo's eschatological expectation .....                               | 178 |
| IV. Conclusion .....                                                                    | 181 |
| C. Jerusalem .....                                                               | 183 |
| I. Jerusalem in Philonic scholarship .....                                              | 184 |
| II. The City of God as the world and as the peaceful soul of the wise ....              | 191 |
| III. The authority of Jerusalem .....                                                   | 194 |
| IV. Conclusion .....                                                                    | 200 |
| D. The Temple .....                                                              | 201 |
| I. The Temple in Philonic scholarship .....                                             | 202 |
| II. Philo's Diaspora location and the tension between the literal andsymbolic ..... | 207 |
| III. The community as Temple and the sanctity of the synagogue .....                    | 213 |
| IV. The function of Philo's allegorical Temple language .....                           | 217 |
| V. The Temple, the Spirit, and authority .....                                          | 219 |
| VI. Conclusion: God's House – Temple or Universe? .....                                 | 222 |
| E. Conclusion .....                                                              | 223 |

|                                                                |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Chapter 4: Paul's ἐκκλησία and Philo's πολιτεία in the world.. | 229 |
| A. Introduction .....                                   | 229 |
| B. The Land .....                                       | 233 |
| C. Jerusalem.....                                       | 241 |
| D. The Temple .....                                     | 248 |
| E. Conclusion .....                                     | 263 |
| Chapter 5: Conclusion .....                                | 267 |
| Bibliography.....                                          | 273 |
| Index of References .....                                      | 297 |
| Author Index .....                                             | 311 |
| Subject Index.....                                             | 317 |