Chapter 1..... 1
Introduction... 1
1.1. Motivation 4
1.2. Dissertation scope 10
1.3. Proof-of-concept..... 13
1.4. EconBiz portal..... 14
1.5. ZBW personas 17
1.6. Research questions 19
1.7. Scientific contribution 21
1.8. Published work 22
1.9. Structure of the thesis 25

Chapter 2..... 29
Journals and traditional impact filters 29
2.1. Journals.. 29
 2.1.1. The history of journals in economics and business studies 31
 2.1.2. Indexing data sources for scientific journals..... 33
2.2. Citation analysis 35
 2.2.1. Citation indexes as sources for information retrieval (IR) 36
 2.2.2. Identifying “trendy topics” using citations..... 37
 2.2.3. Citation behavior in economics 38
2.3. Journal level indicators as relevance filters 40
 2.3.1. Journal Impact Factor as a source for filtering relevant journals 40
 2.3.2. h-index as a source for filtering relevant journals 41
 2.3.3. Journal rankings as a source for filtering relevant journals..... 42
2.4. Discussion 45

Chapter 3..... 47
Altmetrics as new filters..... 47
3.1. Scholarly use of social media..... 48
3.2. Classification of altmetrics 49
3.3. Mendeley and Altmetric.com 50
 3.3.1. Mendeley, a social reference management system..... 50
 3.3.2. Mendeley readership information 52
 3.3.3. Altmetric.com 56
 3.3.4. Altmetric attention score 56
 3.3.5. Altmetric attention sources..... 58
3.4. Altmetric as sources for filtering highly cited articles 61
3.5. Altmetrics as sources for filtering “trendy topics” 62
3.6. Altmetric studies for economic literature..... 63

3.7. Journal level altmetrics	64
3.8. Altmetric challenges.....	67
3.9. Discussion	68

Chapter 4.....71

Methodology: data and technical approaches	71
4.1. Journal selection strategy	71
4.2. Top 1,000 journals from economics and business studies	73
4.3. Data collection phase	75
4.3.1. Crawling Crossref as data service for E and BS journals	77
4.3.2. Datatable design for Crossref in MySQL	80
4.3.3. Crawling Mendeley for E and BS journals.....	81
4.3.4. Downloading information from Altmetric.com.....	87
4.4. Conclusion.....	89

Chapter 5.....91

Top 1,000 economic and business studies journals and their altmetric information	91
5.1. Dataset I: Crossref coverage for journals in E and BS.....	91
5.2. Dataset II: Mendeley coverage for journals in E and BS	93
5.2.1. Mendeley readership information: reader counts	94
5.2.2. Mendeley readership information: discipline.....	97
5.2.3. Mendeley readership information: academic status	100
5.2.4. Mendeley readership information: country	103
5.3. Dataset III: Altmetric.com coverage for journals in E and BS	104
5.3.1. Altmetric.com—altmetric attention score	105
5.3.2. Altmetric.com attention sources	109
5.3.3. The impact of the top 5 Altmetric.com attention sources	112
5.3.4. Correlation of citation counts with all altmetric attention sources.....	116
5.3.5. Identifying trendy topics using altmetrics (proof of concept with latent dirichlet allocation)	120
5.4. Discussion and conclusion	124

Chapter 6.....129

Questionnaire in evaluating altmetrics usage for journals in economic and business studies	129
6.1. Does the filtering of journal articles work using altmetrics?	129
6.2. The setup of the questionnaire	130
6.2.1. First part: The demographic information	131
6.2.2. Second part: The task assigned to the participants and related questions	131
6.2.3. Third part: How useful are the metrics.....	136
6.3. Survey dissemination	137
6.4. Results	137
6.4.1. The demographics of the participants	137

6.4.2. Findings: Article selection based on the given task	141
6.4.3. Findings: Bibliometrics indicators and journal rankings	142
6.4.4. Findings: Altmetric information on journal level.....	144
6.4.5. Findings: General opinions on the usefulness of indicators.....	150
6.4.6 Findings: Open questions	154
6.5. Discussion and conclusion	157

Chapter 7..... 159

Discussion, conclusion and future work	159
7.1. Lessons learned from the main findings	160
7.2. Implication of this thesis	165
7.3. Limitations of the findings	170
7.4. Future work	171
