

Contents

7 Acknowledgments

- 8 Peter Bernhard and Torsten Blume: Ludwig Grote:
A Conservative Friend of the Bauhaus
- 22 Peter Bernhard: Grote's Bauhaus Idea
- 31 Torsten Blume: On the Bauhaus Idea as "Open Form"
- 44 Peter Bernhard: The Bauhaus Comes to Dessau:
A Chronology
- 55 Ludwig Grote: Das Weimarer Bauhaus (The Bauhaus Weimar)
(1925)
- 62 Nadine Willing-Stritzke: Ludwig Grote in Dessau: A Modern Gallerist and Museum Director
- 73 Ludwig Grote: Opening Speech of the Exhibition
Young Bauhaus Painters (1928)
- 78 Peter Bernhard: "It's not working with Hannes Meyer any longer": Ludwig Grote's Role in the Dismissal of the Second Director of the Bauhaus
- 93 Christian Eger: The Politics of Depoliticization:
Ludwig Grote's Dedication to a German Bauhaus
- 105 Elisabeth Kremer: The First Exhibition of "Degenerate Art" in Germany: Ludwig Grote's Role after the Closure of the Bauhaus by the National Socialist Party
- 117 Birgit Jooss: Ludwig Grote and the Galerie Zinckgraf
(formerly Heinemann) in the Years 1940–1946
- 130 Susanne Neubauer: Ludwig Grote and Brazil's Interest in the Bauhaus: International Entanglements and Adaptations
in Cultural Policy
- 138 Torsten Blume: From Stuttgart into the World: The Bauhaus
as Romantic and Representing the State
- 155 50 Years after 50 Years Bauhaus in 1968: Hans Christ and Iris Dressler in Conversation with Torsten Blume

Appendix

- 166 Biography
- 175 Bibliography
- 181 Exhibitions
- 186 Image Credits and Abbreviations
- 188 Imprint