

Contents

Preface	ix
1 The “ Ren ” of the “Unity of Mind and Body” and Confucian Virtue Ethics—the Structure of Confucian Benevolence and the Guodian Manuscript’s Character of “ Ren ”	1
I. “Sympathy” and the “ Ren ” of the “Unity of Mind and Body”	2
II. The “ Ren ” of “Serving One’s Parents” and the “Body”	12
III. “Extending Oneself to Others” and the “ Ren ” of “Loving the People” and “Loving Others”	20
IV. The “ Ren ” of the “Unity of the Ten Thousand Things” and “Expanding Oneself to Others and Things”	25
V. Extra Discussion	31
2 The Model of Human Nature and View on the Way of Humanity in the Xing zi Ming Chu —an Explanation of the Concepts of “ Xing ,” “ Qing ,” “ Xin ,” and “ Dao ”	47
I. Human Nature “Has Both Good and Bad” and Xing zi Ming Chu	48

	II. The Shape of “ Qing ” as “Emotions”	53
	III. The Different Levels of “ Xin ” and Their Relations	66
	IV. “Ritual,” “Music,” and “ Dao ”	74
3	The Concept of “ De ” in the Bamboo and Silk Wuxing	93
	I. “ De ”: “Virtuous Actions” and the “Cultivation” of the Inner Mind	94
	II. “Harmony,” “Happiness,” and “ De ”	104
	III. “Heaven,” “the Way of Heaven,” and “ De ”	116
4	The Early Confucian “Theory of Shendu ,” “Moral Study for Oneself,” and “Public Concern”	129
	I. “ Du ” as an Inner Moral Nature	130
	II. The Levels of “ Shen ” and “ Shendu ”	147
	III. The “Ideology of Being at Ease in Morality”: The “Theory of Shendu ” and the “Moral Study for Oneself”	158
	IV. “Public Concern”: The “Theory of Shendu ” and “Inner Sage and Outer King”	168
5	The Confucians’ Theory of Moral Autonomy, View on Circumstance, and Qionгда yi Shi	185
	I. The Similarities and Differences Between Records in Qionгда yi Shi and Transmitted Texts	186
	II. Qionгда yi Shi and the Confucians’ “View on Circumstance”	197
	III. Moral “Autonomy” and “Reflection”	209
6	The Origin of the Confucian Hermeneutics of the Classics	225
	Introduction: Civilizations, Traditions, and Classical Texts	225
	I. The Formation and Convergence of the “Six Types” of Texts	227
	II. The Legitimization and Canonization of the “Six Types” of Texts	233
	III. Understanding and Interpretation: A Summarization of the Entire Meaning of the Classics	238
	IV. Texts to Compare the “Classics” with—“Descriptions,” “Interpretations,” “Commentaries,” and “Explanations”	242

7	A New Understanding of the Shanghai Museum's Shizhuan and the Confucian Education of the Shi	251
I.	The Author of the Shanghai Museums Shi Commentary	252
II.	"Chapter Names" and the Order of the "Feng", "Ya", and "Song"	257
III.	The Confucian Study of the Shi and the Shizhuan	261
IV.	"Virtue," "Kings," and "Mandates"	265
V.	"Human Nature," "Emotions," and "Intentions"	269
8	Kongzi's "Delighting in the Yijing ," Explaining the Yijing , and the Search for "Virtue and Meaning"—Centering on the Phrase "the Master Said" in the Silk "Commentaries to the Yijing "	277
I.	Why Kongzi Delighted in the Yijing Late in Life	278
II.	The Total Characteristic of the Yijing , "Virtue and Meaning," and the "Way and Meaning"	284
III.	The "Virtue and Meaning" of the Hexagram Statements of the Yijing	289
IV.	The "Virtue and Meaning" of the Line Statements of the Yijing	297
9	Tang Yu zhi Dao and the Multifaceted Transference of Kingly Power	313
I.	The Division and Compromise between "Abdication" and "Transmission"	314
II.	Consultations, Nominations, and Trials	324
III.	Political Succession and Fate	330
IV.	Abdication, Retirement, and Caring for Life	336
10	The Shuihudi Qin Bamboo Manuscript Weili zhi Dao and the Confucian Style Political Ethics in the State of Qin	345
I.	"Taking Officials as Teachers," the "Way of Officials," and the Political Ethics of the State of Qin	346
II.	"Being an Official," the "Heart of the People," and "Exemplary Models"	355
III.	Leniency, Justice, and Tolerance	362
IV.	Respect, Vigilance, and Dedication	371
V.	Benevolence and Filial Reverence	379