

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Setting the Stage: Economic Liberalization and Authoritarianism in Resource-Poor Countries of the MENA Region	1
1.2	Research Gaps Addressed by the Study	5
1.3	Outline of the Study and Introductory Remarks	8
1.4	How to Read this Book	10
2	Key Terms	13
2.1	Economic Liberalization, Macroeconomic Stabilization, Structural Adjustment	13
2.2	Political System, State, Regime, Government	19
2.3	Authoritarianism, Authoritarian Regime, Neopatrimonialism	25
2.4	Regime Stability, Economic and Political Stabilization	33
2.5	Resource Endowment	42
3	Theory and State of the Art	45
3.1	Stability of Authoritarian Regimes	46
3.1.1	Political Factors	47
3.1.1.1	Polity: Neopatrimonialism	48
3.1.1.2	Politics: Actors and Institutions	52
3.1.1.3	Policies: Legitimation	63
3.1.2	Economic Factors: Structural Heterogeneity and Rent	75
3.1.3	Social Factors: Mobilization; Class Relations; and Sociocultural Structures	95

3.1.4	International Factors: External Actors and the Regional Context	111
3.1.5	Summary: Factors Potentially Responsible for the Stability of Authoritarian Regimes	126
3.2	Effects of Economic Liberalization	131
3.2.1	Economic Effects: State Budget; International Accounts; and Economic Growth	131
3.2.2	International Effects: Foreign Loans and Reduction of Debt	141
3.2.3	Socioeconomic Effects: Socioeconomic Development and its Transmission to Social Groups and Classes	142
3.2.4	Political Effects: Social Class Relations and Relative Strength of the State	161
3.2.5	Summary: Economic; International; Socioeconomic; and Political Effects of Economic Liberalization	166
4	Theoretical Model and Hypotheses	173
4.1	Theoretical Model	173
4.2	Hypotheses on Economic Liberalization and the Stability of Authoritarian Regimes	176
4.2.1	“Integrated Hypotheses” on the Link between Economic Liberalization and the Stability of Authoritarian Regimes via Economic Stabilization ...	177
4.2.2	“Integrated Hypotheses” on the Link between Economic Liberalization and the Stability of Authoritarian Regimes via Political Stabilization	177
5	Epistemology, Methodology, Methods	181
5.1	Epistemology and Methodology	181
5.2	Methods	183
5.2.1	Justification and Description of the Methods	183
5.2.2	Operationalization of the Main Variables	188
5.2.3	Case Selection	190
5.2.4	Sources	198
5.2.5	Procedure in the Empirical Part	199

6 Empirical Analysis—Economic Liberalization and the Stability of Authoritarian Regimes in Resource-poor Countries of the MENA Region: Egypt, Tunisia, Jordan, and Morocco, 1950–2011	201
6.1 Roots and Course of Economic Liberalization	202
6.1.1 Immediate Postindependence Period	202
6.1.2 State-led Development	209
6.1.3 Infitah	214
6.1.4 Stabilization and Structural Adjustment	218
6.1.5 Reform Periods and Economic-liberalization Policies	228
6.2 Economic Stabilization	257
6.2.1 State Budget and International Accounts	258
6.2.2 Economic Growth and Socioeconomic Development	313
6.2.3 Test of “Integrated Hypotheses” in a MSSD (Periods 1965–1986, 1993–2004, 2005–2010)	412
6.2.4 Preliminary Conclusion: the Effect of Economic Liberalization on Regime Stability via Economic Stabilization	423
6.3 Political Stabilization	434
6.3.1 Politics: Centralization of Power; Narrowing of Regime Coalitions; and Growing Influence of Private Business Actors	435
6.3.1.1 Centralization of Power	435
6.3.1.2 Technocratization	439
6.3.1.3 Changing Roles for Labor, Capital, and the State	440
6.3.1.4 Incorporation of Business Actors into the Regime	451
6.3.1.5 Presidential and Royal Families as Business Actors	457
6.3.2 Policies: Struggling for Legitimacy; and Controlling Economic Surplus	461
6.3.2.1 Political Liberalization	462
6.3.2.2 Repression	466
6.3.2.3 Adapting Legitimation	470
6.3.2.4 Slow, Incomplete, and Clientelist Privatization	477

6.3.2.5	Market Protection and Imperfect Competition	484
6.3.3	Test of “Integrated Hypotheses” in a MSSD (Periods 1965–1986, 1993–2004, 2005–2010)	494
6.3.4	Preliminary Conclusion: the Effect of Economic Liberalization on Regime Stability Via Political Stabilization	551
7	Conclusion	567
7.1	The Effect of Economic Liberalization on the Stability of Resource-Poor Authoritarian Regimes: Egypt, Tunisia, Jordan, and Morocco, 1950–2011	567
7.2	Contributions to the State of the Art	580
7.3	Avenues for Further Research	580
8	Appendix: Hypotheses Tables	583
	Bibliography	601