

CONTENTS

Dramatis Personae	vii
Introduction:
Flight and Refugees in Historical Perspective	1
Refugees as a field of research	7
Flight and migration	13
Reflections on space: A larger Europe	16
 1 The Roots of Intolerance:
Religious Conflicts and Religious Refugees	22
1.1 The Spanish Muslims and Jews	22
1.2 The refuge of the Huguenots	28
1.3 The Reconquista of Southeastern Europe	37
1.4 Flight from pogroms	43
1.5 Victims and perpetrators: The late Ottoman Empire	44
1.6 The long legacy of religious violence	47
 2 The Two Faces of Nationalism: Ethnic Cleansing and National Solidarity	54
2.1 The rise of modern nationalism and the “long” First World War	54
2.2 The “clean sweep”: Mass flight and population removal in the 1940s	69
2.3 The case of Palestine	97
2.4. Postcolonial flight and remigration	112
2.5 Ethnic cleansing in the former Yugoslavia	121
2.6 The (ir)responsibility to protect	130
 3 Political Refugees and the Emergence of an International Refugee Policy	139
3.1 The making of the modern refugee in the “long” nineteenth century	139
3.2 The Russian Civil War and the nascent international refugee regime	158

vi · CONTENTS

3.3 Flight from fascism	162
3.4 The early Cold War and displaced persons	169
3.5 Open doors to the West: 1956, 1968, and the “boat people”	185
3.6 Flight from Poland and the first turn against refugees	210
4 Refugee Politics after the Cold War	231
4.1 Humanitarianism after 1989 and “Fortress Europe”	231
4.2 The Syrian and the European “refugee crisis”	248
4.3 The limits of humanitarianism	264
4.4 Experiences of flight: A summary	279
Acknowledgments	285
Notes	289
Archival Resources	327
Bibliography	329
Index	339