

Contents

Andrea Di Michele and Filippo Focardi

Introduction — 1

I. Fascism and Nazism in a Transnational Key

Arnd Bauerkämper

German Historiography on National Socialism in Its Transnational Context — 13

Roberta Pergher

Italian Fascism in Transnational Historiography — 33

II. “Volksgemeinschaft” and the Relationship between Italian Society and Fascism

Frank Bajohr

From Debates on the Political Order to Visions of Community.

The Trajectories of Writing a Social History of National Socialism — 61

Paul Corner

Beyond Consensus: Rethinking Italian Fascism — 73

III. The Dictators: Hitler and Mussolini

Wolfgang Schieder

Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini. The Staging of a Political Friendship — 87

Richard J.B. Bosworth

Benito Mussolini: 100 Years on — 107

Gustavo Corni

Adolf Hitler — 127

IV. Violence

Sybille Steinbacher

“Spaces” of Violence. Reflections on a Popular Concept in Holocaust Research — 151

Amedeo Osti Guerrazzi

Fascist Violence. History and Historiography — 163

V. Stone Fascism after the War

Albert A. Feiber and Thomas Schlemmer

Obersalzberg and the Axis.

State Visits between Idyll, Diplomacy, and Atrocity — 185

Paolo Nicoloso

Traces of Fascist Architecture in Republican Italy — 225

Andrea Di Michele

Fascist Monuments on the Border.

The Case of Bolzano/Bozen, South Tyrol — 247

VI. The New Right and Fascism

Roger Griffin

“Sempre Presente?”. The Relevance of the Concept “Fascism” to Understanding Contemporary Socio-Political Realities — 277

Marzia Ponso

Old Ideologies and New Strategies. German Right-Wing Populism — 297

Matteo Albanese

CasaPound Italia and Forza Nuova. Back to the Future — 317

Contributors — 335