

Table of Contents

Foreword	1
1. The authority of human rights	3
1.1. Nagging questions	3
1.2. An authority prior to legislative standard-setting	6
1.3. Diverse ways of highlighting the authority of human rights	9
1.4. Rights without price tags	14
1.5. Unpacking the inherent persuasiveness of human rights	16
2. What are human rights? The defining principles	21
2.1. No timeless “canon” of rights	21
2.2. Defining the human rights approach	28
2.3. Concluding questions	40
3. “Inter homines esse”: human rights as relational rights	43
3.1. Promoting the “unencumbered self”?	43
3.2. Rights of individuals, not “individualistic” rights	46
3.3. Transforming, not eroding community life	49
3.4. “Inter homines esse” (Hannah Arendt)	52
4. Rights of all humans across boundaries: universalism under scrutiny	59
4.1. Interventionism across boundaries	59
4.2. Blind spots and hidden agendas? Critical voices	61
4.3. Two types of critique	64
4.4. Freely articulated diversity – the antidote to uniformity	66
4.5. Inescapable biases?	69

4.6. The role of human rights: strengthening communicative agency	72
4.7. Implications of a universalism “on probation”	75
5. Tackling inequalities and power asymmetries	81
5.1. Human rights as egalitarian rights	81
5.2. Egalitarian rights in a world full of inequalities?	84
5.3. Conventions specifically dealing with discrimination	86
5.4. The goal of substantive equality	97
5.5. Tackling power asymmetries through rights-based empowerment	100
5.6. Strengthening democratic culture	103
5.7. The need for concerted political efforts	107
6. Restricting freedom in the name of order? The role of limitation clauses	111
6.1. The notorious “yes-but” attitude toward human rights	111
6.2. Limiting the scope of permissible limitations	113
6.3. Strict justification requirements rather than vague “balancing”	120
6.4. Why it is important to deal with limitation clauses	123
7. Corruption, scapegoating and the politics of fear: political root-causes of violations	127
7.1. Actors, factors and phenomena	127
7.2. Poisonous effects of endemic corruption	128
7.3. Scapegoating and conspiracy projections	132
7.4. Autocracies, one-party regimes and the politics of fear	136
7.5. Tackling structural root-causes	140

8. Solidarity across boundaries: instruments of international human rights protection	145
8.1. Local versus global human rights commitment?	145
8.2. Protecting local human rights defenders	147
8.3. Civil society contributions to international monitoring	152
8.4. National infrastructure with international supervision	155
8.5. On the path toward a “human rights ecosystem”?	159
8.6. Solidarity in a spirit of respect	164
Bibliography	167
UN Human Rights Documents	167
Regional Human Rights Documents	170
Literature	170
List of Abbreviations	179