

Contents

Introduction	11
1. Where to begin?	11
2. Aesthetic play, sound and sociology	13
3. The importance of thinking-with	14
4. A posture towards	15
5. Overview of the work	16

THINKING WITH | The alienation of knowledge:

A theoretical frame	21
1. For a sociology of sociological controversies	21
2. Defining the controversy	25
3. The roots and implications	29
4. The consequences in sociological thinking	35
5. The situation of knowledge	40
6. Towards speculative fabulation?	44
7. The necessity of a choice	48

SOUND | From silent knowledge to sounding representations

1. Knowledge has been made silent	51
2. The hegemony of the visual space	53
3. The issue with text	58
4. Re-investing the acoustic space?	62
5. Perception and the reification of sound	74
6. What is sounding?	76

THINKING WITH SOUND Building a sociological sonic thinking	81
1. Refining questions	81
2. Sonic Thinking as a thinking-with	83
3. Sonic Flux: a new materialist ontology of sound	88
4. Sonic Flux and ontogenesis	92
5. From Sonic Flux back to Sonic Thinking	98
6. Doing sonic thinking?	102
7. For a sociological thinking with sounds	107
 THINKING-WITH A speculative venture between aesthetic thought and research-creation	113
1. Sonic thinking and artistic practices	113
2. Thinking in phases?	116
3. La pensée (techno-)esthétique	121
4. Aesthetic thought and knowledge	126
5. Research-creation	129
6. Towards an ethico-aesthetic paradigm?	134
7. Does it sound?	138
 THINKING-WITH SOUNDS Re-collection of an attempt	143
0. Building a loop – a quick note	143
1. Gathering a thinking doing	144
2. Échos de la pierre – experiencing sound formations	146
3. Thinking-with sound in iterations: repetition and rhythm	159
4. A rhythmic thinking	162
5. Thinking-with space	171
6. The event as theory-building	175
 FEEDBACK Sound Formations	185
Introductory notes	185
 Conclusion	191
Not a book about sound	191
Bringing back magic	192
Sociology to come?	194

Bibliography 197