

Contents

List of Figures	11
Acknowledgments	15
Notes on translation	17
Summary	19
Introduction	21

Part 1: Before choreography, expansion

Introduction to Part 1	39
Chapter 1: Monsieur de Saint-Hubert's expanded choreographic poietics	43
Of ballet and of dance	45
A master of order	51
The subject of ballet	57
Conclusion	63
Chapter 2: Choreo-graphy or the incorporeal inscription of choreography	65
The ambivalent place of the body	68
The space of the dance	77
A graphic dance on paper	84
A choreo-graphic logic	92
Conclusion	97

Chapter 3: Stillness in nature's dance: expanded choreographies
of the Italian Renaissance	99
Corporeal interstices and correspondences	101
The choreographies of music and of nature	108
Choreography in a world of proportion	112
Choreographies of the non-kinetic	117
Conclusion	121

Conclusion to Part 1	123
-----------------------------------	-----

Part 2: Expanded choreographies of the now

Introduction to Part 2	129
-------------------------------------	-----

Chapter 4: Programming (as) choreography: a series of kinect videos
by Mathilde Chénin	135
A corporeal source of reference that is lost	138
Body, video, code – multiple choreographies	146
Adaptive choreographic data	151
Conclusion	157

Chapter 5: A choreography of the in-between: Olga Mesa's Solo a ciegas
(con lágrimas azules)	159
Body, text, sound, film, lights – in relation	161
Doing choreography	168
Of what is related	173
In the between-ness	178
Conclusion	184

Chapter 6: Being (in) a choreographic object: William Forsythe's artificial nature
installation in Groningen	187
A choreography of nature	190
A choreography of non-moving movement	197
To look at a tree happening	205
Conclusion	210

Conclusion to Part 2	213
-----------------------------------	-----

Part 3: Expanded modernities

Introduction to Part 3 219

Chapter 7: The multiple choreographies of the Ballets Suédois' Relâche 227

 Of dancing in a ballet 229

 Of motion in the body 235

 Arranging (expanded) choreography 239

 Conclusion 244

Chapter 8: Looking at a world in movement: Rudolf Laban's work in industry 247

 Anthropocentrism in question..... 251

 Expanded movement 258

 Managing movement 266

 Conclusion 274

Chapter 9: Creation, imagination, paradise: lettrism's excursions into choreography 277

 Neither Diaghilev nor Graham, but Isou 280

 Expanded choreographic excursion one: media crossings 287

 Expanded choreographic excursion two: imagining choreography 297

 Conclusion 304

Conclusion to Part 3 307

Conclusion 311

Bibliography 323

 Archival sources 323

 Books, articles, online texts 326

 Video, image, and audio sources 345

 Interviews 345

Index 347