

Table of Contents

|                                                                                                              |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Preface .....                                                                                                | VII |
| Introduction .....                                                                                           | 1   |
| Chapter 1: D. Z. Phillips' Philosophical Method .....                                                        | 11  |
| 1.1. Philosophy as Description .....                                                                  | 12  |
| 1.1.1. Philosophy as Grammatical and Conceptual Investigation .....                                          | 12  |
| 1.1.2. The Neutrality of Philosophy .....                                                                    | 20  |
| 1.2. Philosophy as Contemplation .....                                                                | 23  |
| 1.2.1. Neither Hot nor Cold but Cool .....                                                                   | 23  |
| 1.2.2. Description, Contemplation, and Phillips' Shift .....                                                 | 25  |
| Chapter 2: D. Z. Phillips on Religious Language .....                                                        | 37  |
| 2.1. A Prelude: The Distinctiveness of Religious Language and        the Unity of Language ..... | 37  |
| 2.2. Meaning of Religious Language as Context-Dependent .....                                         | 42  |
| 2.3. The Absoluteness of Religious Language .....                                                     | 48  |
| 2.4. Religious Language and Pictures .....                                                            | 53  |
| 2.5. Religious Language as Grammatical .....                                                          | 65  |
| 2.6. Religious Language as Confessional and Expressive        but not as Expressivist .....      | 69  |

|                                                                                                                        |     |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Chapter 3: D. Z. Phillips on Religious Truth .....                                                                     | 81  |
| 3.1. Religious Truth as Context-Dependent .....                                                                 | 82  |
| 3.2. Religious Truth as Personal, Confessional, and Spiritual .....                                             | 87  |
| 3.3. The Question of Relativism and Arbitrariness .....                                                         | 93  |
| Chapter 4: D. Z. Phillips on the Reality of God .....                                                                  | 102 |
| 4.1. What the Reality of God Does not Mean .....                                                                | 103 |
| 4.1.1. The Reality of God and the Reality of Physical Objects .....                                                    | 103 |
| 4.1.2. The Rejection of Metaphysical Notions of God .....                                                              | 107 |
| 4.2. What the Reality of God Means .....                                                                        | 112 |
| 4.2.1. The Existence of God .....                                                                                      | 112 |
| 4.2.2. God is Divinely Real .....                                                                                      | 117 |
| 4.2.3. God as Spirit .....                                                                                             | 122 |
| 4.3. Beyond Realism and Non-Realism .....                                                                       | 128 |
| Chapter 5: Beyond Criticisms toward a More Illuminating Viewof Religious Language, Religious Truth, and God .....  | 135 |
| 5.1. The Problem of the Neutrality of Contemplative Philosophy .....                                            | 135 |
| 5.1.1. Description or Prescription? .....                                                                              | 135 |
| 5.1.2. Is Neutrality Possible or Desirable? .....                                                                      | 147 |
| 5.2. Suggestions for a More Illuminating View of Religious Language,        Religious Truth, and God ..... | 152 |
| 5.2.1. The Limits of Language and Metaphor .....                                                                       | 152 |
| 5.2.2. Context-Internal Criteria and Experiential Verificationof Religious Truth .....                             | 166 |
| 5.2.3. Toward the Reality of the Triune God .....                                                                      | 176 |
| Conclusion .....                                                                                                       | 181 |

Table of Contents

XI

|                      |     |
|----------------------|-----|
| Bibliography.....    | 189 |
| Index of Names ..... | 199 |
| Subject Index.....   | 201 |