

Table of Contents

List of Illustrations	11
1 Introduction	15
1.1 The notion of ethnic identity	15
1.2 Studying ethnic identity	17
1.3 The role of status.....	18
1.3.1 One-dimensionality and dichotomisation: The case of classical assimilation theory	18
1.3.2 Empirical evidence raises questions.....	19
1.4 Research interest	22
1.5 Outline of this book.....	24
2 Theoretical Framework.....	27
2.1 The two building blocks of social production function theory.....	27
2.1.1 Resources, goals, needs and utility: The hierarchy of social production functions.....	27
2.1.2 Maintaining and improving personal need satisfaction	30
2.2 Social production functions and context	31
2.3 A general model to explain migrants' ethnic identity	31
2.3.1 Individual resources and contextual conditions.....	33
2.3.2 Instrumental goals for social approval.....	35
2.3.3 Social approval and ethnic identity	38
2.3.4 Separated identity	41
2.3.5 Assimilated identity	43
2.3.6 Dual identity	44
2.3.7 No/weak identity	46
2.4 Summary	48
3 Data	51
3.1 The German National Educational Panel Study (NEPS): Starting cohort (SC) 6	51
3.2 The sample	53
4 Empirical Investigation.....	55
4.1 A note on multinomial logistic regression analysis.....	55
4.2 Analysis 1: Status and ethnic identity: The role of generation status and migrant recognisability.....	57
4.2.1 An intergenerational perspective on status and ethnic identity.....	59
4.2.2 The role of migrant recognisability	65
4.2.3 Model specification and analytical strategy	71
4.2.4 Findings.....	74
4.2.5 Discussion	83
4.3 Analysis 2: Status mismatch and ethnic identity	88
4.3.1 Theoretical considerations and expectations	89

4.3.2	Model specification and analytical strategy	94
4.3.3	Findings.....	98
4.3.4	Discussion	109
4.4	Analysis 3: Exposure time, ethnic identity and the role of status.....	112
4.4.1	An intergenerational perspective on exposure time and ethnic identity	113
4.4.2	Cumulative (dis)advantages? Identity differences between lower- and higher-status migrants over exposure time	117
4.4.3	Model specification and analytical strategy	122
4.4.4	Findings.....	125
4.4.5	Discussion	132
5	Concluding Remarks	135
5.1	Limitations	135
5.2	Main results.....	136
5.3	Future avenues	139
	References.....	141
	Appendix A: Variable overview	161
A.1	Dependent variable	161
A.2	Explaining variables.....	163
A.3	Other variables	166
A.4	Dealing with missingness: Multiple imputation with chained equations	169
	Appendix B: Additional analyses.....	173
	Index	177