

Contents

List of Figures	ix
Translator's Note	xi
Foreword by David Graeber	xii
Introduction	xxiii
Prologue: On the Road to Til Koçer	xxviii
1. Background	1
1.1 Geography of Rojava	2
1.2 Historical Overview	9
2. Rojava's Diverse Cultures	18
2.1 Kurds	18
2.2 Arabs	22
2.3 Armenians and Syriacs	26
2.4 Smaller Population Groups	32
3. Democratic Confederalism	36
3.1 The PKK and Its Paradigm Shift	36
3.2 Democratic Confederalism	39
3.3 Council Democracy	41
3.4 Democratic Concepts	43
4. The Liberation	47
4.1 Organizing Begins	47
4.2 The Arab Spring in Syria	49
4.3 Illegal Councils	51
4.4 The Hewlêr Agreement	53
4.5 The Revolution Begins in Kobanî	54
4.6 The Liberation of Dêrik and Afrîn	55
4.7 After the Liberation	57
5. A Women's Revolution	61
5.1 Rojava Women	62
5.2 Women in the Revolution	63
5.3 Kongreya Star	64

5.4	Women in the Three Cantons	67
5.5	Dual Leadership and the 40 Percent Quota	69
5.6	Women's Organizations	70
5.7	Gender Equality Is Also a Men's Issue	76
5.8	Radical Islam Versus Women's Emancipation	77
5.9	Outlook	79
6.	Democratic Autonomy in Rojava	84
6.1	The Democratic Union Party (PYD)	84
6.2	The People's Council of West Kurdistan (MGRK)	85
6.3	The MGRK System	87
6.4	The Commune of Aleppo	95
6.5	The Supreme Kurdish Council (SKC)	103
6.6	The Municipal Administrations	104
6.7	The Social Contract	109
6.8	The Democratic-Autonomous Administrations (DAAs)	114
6.9	The Federal System in Rojava/Northern Syria (FRNS)	116
6.10	The MGRK and the DAAs	118
7.	Civil Society Associations	122
7.1	Union of Civil Society Associations	124
7.2	Culture and Art	126
7.3	The Revolutionary Youth Movement	126
7.4	Association of Families of Martyrs	128
7.5	Human Rights Commission	129
7.6	Civil Society Organizing	130
8.	Defense: The Theory of the Rose	133
8.1	People's Protection Units (YPG)	133
8.2	Women's Protection Units (YPJ)	135
8.3	Legitimate Self-defense	139
8.4	The Liberation of Serêkaniyê	140
8.5	The Liberation of Til Koçer	146
8.6	Training and Induction	148
8.7	Equipment, Units, and Tactics	152
8.8	Serêkaniyê Today	153
8.9	The Liberation of Girê Spî and Şengal	154
8.10	The Syrian Democratic Forces (SDF)	156
8.11	The Significance of the YPG and YPJ	158

CONTENTS

9. The New Justice System	164
9.1 Structure	165
9.2 Peace Committees	168
9.3 Procedures	168
9.4 Justice Platforms	170
9.4 Asayîş	171
10. The Democratization of Education	175
10.1 Before and After the Revolution	176
10.2 Reconstruction and Pedagogy	178
10.3 The Academy for Kurdish Language, History, and Literature (AZDW)	179
10.4 Academies	181
10.4 Outlook	183
11. Health Care	185
11.1 Before and After the Liberation	185
11.2 Health Assemblies	186
11.3 Challenges	188
11.2 Health Assemblies and the DAAs	189
12. The Social Economy	192
12.1 Under Ba'ath Colonization	192
12.2 Effects of the Liberation	194
12.3 The Embargo	195
12.4 The Social Economy	197
12.5 Cooperatives	199
12.6 Control of Production	204
12.7 Expanding the Cooperatives	205
12.8 The Challenges Ahead	207
13. Ecological Challenges	211
13.1 The Destruction of Biodiversity	212
13.2 Water Crisis	214
13.3 Waste Disposal	217
13.4 Air Pollution	219
13.5 Petroleum Production	219
13.6 Outlook	220

14. Neighbors	222
14.1 The Islamization of the Syrian Opposition	222
14.2 Islamic State (IS)	227
14.3 The Kurdish Regional Government (KRG)	231
14.4 Turkey Under the AKP	234
14.5 Democratic Autonomy in North Kurdistan	238
14.6 Turkmen Militias	241
14.7 The SDF and the Jihadists	243
15. Prospects	250
15.1 Rojava and Hegemonic Powers	250
15.2 Solutions Within Syria	254
15.3 International Solidarity	256
15.4 Communalism or Barbarism	259
 Afterword: The Philosophy of Democratic Autonomy	 262
Asya Abdullah
 Glossary	 268
About the Authors	272
Index	273