

Contents

	Prologue to the English Edition
	A Brief Word on Long Goodbyes	11
	World history is the world's tribunal	11
	Homesick for dictatorship	12
	A happy life in the GDR?	13
	Prologue to the Original German Edition (1998)
	In the Labyrinth of the Past	17
	The minute of departure	17
	The divided memory	19
	The unrelenting memory	23
	The dialogic method or the double truth of Rabbi Loew	24
	History as uneventfulness	26
	Cheerfully tackling the past	29
	Clio as the goddess of freedom	30
Part I	Change and Continuity	33
Chapter One	The Sixties and Seventies in the History of the GDR	33
	The end of the Ulbricht era	33
	The endless winter of 1969–70 or the four main difficulties of building socialism	41
	The struggle for power behind the scenes	42
Chapter Two	The Honecker Era	49
	The Eighth Party Congress of the SED	49
	Erich Honecker at the head of the Party	51
	The Ninth Party Congress	57

	The late seventies	61
	Stagnation and crisis in the eighties	64
	Erich Honecker and the fall of the GDR	66
Part II	The GDR and Europe	71
Chapter One	The Policy of Détente in the Early Seventies	71
	Change of government in Bonn	71
	Transit agreement and the Basic Treaty	73
Chapter Two	The GDR and the “National Question”	77
	Relinquishing the German nation	77
	SED leadership between isolation and “common German responsibilities”	80
Chapter Three	Daily Life in Divided Germany	84
	The GDR and Western television	84
	The divided heaven over Berlin	88
	The Intershop—A glimpse into the paradise of affluent society	92
	Divided language in a divided land?	97
	The GDR as seen in the West or the “noble savage” of the consumer age	102
	The return of the German nation in the fall of 1989	105
Chapter Four	The GDR as Part of the Soviet Empire	108
	Stalinism in the guise of the GDR	108
	The GDR as “homunculus sovieticus”?	110
	The unloved brother	113
	The Polish crisis of 1980–81	114
	German-Polish friendship in everyday life	116
Part III	The Structures of Power	121
Chapter One	The Party	121
	The Party as the mother of the masses	121
	Party congresses	124
	The Central Committee	125
	The Politbüro	127
	The Party apparatus	128

Chapter Two	Bloc Parties and Mass Organizations	137
	Secret opposition or allies of the SED?	137
	The mass organizations in daily life	139
Chapter Three	The State Apparatus	144
	Unity of state and Party	144
	Elections in the GDR	146
Part IV	Control and Submission	151
Chapter One	The Legitimation of Power	151
	Historical forms of state legitimation	151
	The dictatorship of love	153
	Ideology as the opium of the rulers	157
	Legitimation through history	162
Chapter Two	Power and Secrecy	166
	The public sphere and communication under dictatorship	166
	Decreed publicity as a loss of freedom	168
	The secret state	169
	Censorship and "cold book-burning" in the land of readers	174
	Control of the public sphere	188
	Surrogate publicity	191
Chapter Three	The Theater of Power	201
	The GDR as a Potemkin village	201
	The World Festival of Youth and Students in the summer of 1973	202
	FC Bayern München vs. SG Dynamo Dresden, November 7, 1973	205
	Güstrow, December 13, 1981	207
Part V	Society and Economy	211
Chapter One	East German Society	211
	Demographics	211
	Love, sex and tenderness	212
	Women and socialism	213
	The land of happy babies	218
	Senior citizens	222
	Housing shortage and urban development	224

Chapter Two	Economic Policy of the SED	231
	The foundations of a socialist economy	231
	The economic development of the GDR in the seventies and eighties	238
	Debt crisis	247
	The "KoKo empire"	250
	Ecological crisis as "classified information"	257
Chapter Three	Daily Life in the GDR	260
	The secret power of the guardians of scarcity	260
	Classified ads as a realm of freedom	263
	The automobile as the hobbyhorse of East Germans	264
	Life in the GDR	267
Chapter Four	Zeitgeist	270
	The walled-in state as a poetic sphere	270
	" Es geht seinen Gang " or the "comfy"
	dictatorship of the SED	277
	Socialist Biedermeier as a lifestyle of the eighties	281
	Subculture, or the culture of negative freedom	282
Part VI	Elements of Crisis	287
Chapter One	Critical Intellectuals and the SED	287
	"When power and intellect unite ..."	287
	The dream of democratic socialism or the immanence of heresy	288
	Cultural policy after the Eighth Party Congress of the SED	291
	The singing movement and the Festival of Political Songs	293
	The expatriation of Wolf Biermann and its aftermath	295
	Literature and politics after 1976	298
Chapter Two	Church, State and Opposition	302
	Churches in the GDR	302
	"The Church within Socialism"	305
	The self-immolation of Pastor Brüsewitz	308
	The summit meeting on March 6, 1978	310
	Opposition in the freedom of the church	311

Chapter Three	The “New Cold War” and East German Society of the Eighties	312
	World politics in the shadow of nuclear peril	312
	The militarization of East German society	314
	“Swords to plowshares”—The independent peace movement in the GDR	319
	The “Western” Greens and the peace movement in the GDR	332
	The embassy protest on November 4, 1983	339
	Resignation and a new beginning for the human-rights movement in the spirit of perestroika	342
Chapter Four	The Wall and the Problem of Emigration	344
	The border	344
	Parole from the prison of a socialist state—
	The “travel cadre” system	346
	Republikflucht, or illegal emigration	347
	The applicant movement	348
Part VII	The Road to Collapse	357
Chapter One	Perestroika and the GDR	357
	The end of the Brezhnev era	357
	East German society and the advent of perestroika	358
	The ban on Sputnik	361
	Perestroika and opposition	362
Chapter Two	Protest Actions of the Opposition	364
	The “Zionskirche affair” of November 1987	364
	The “January incidents” of 1988	365
	The conflict over church newspapers	372
	Radio Glasnost	374
	January 1989	375
	The local elections of May 1989	376
	“Heavenly peace”	379
	The founding of New Forum	381
	The West and the East German opposition	384
Chapter Three	The Decline of the SED Leadership	386
	The Party in crisis	386
	The failed “secret glasnost” of the SED leadership	390

Chapter Four	The End of Party Rule	392
	October 1989	392
	The 4th of November	398
	The fall of the Wall	399
	Epilogue: The Dialectic of Decline	403
	The GDR in German history	403
	The beginning and end of the "third way"	409
	The individual in the system of repression	412
	The Stasi and the Wende	414
	The end and the idealization of East German opposition	417
	The lessons of history	419
	Publisher's Afterword to the English Edition	423
Appendix	Notes	427
	Abbreviations	456
	Index	458
	Author and Translator	463