

Contents

I	Introduction — 1
II	Theory — 14
1	The Archive and the Mid-18 th to Early 19 th Century — 14
2	Loss, Melancholia, the Archive and Spectrality — 35
3	Archives — 45
3.1	(Imagined) Spaces and Objects — 45
3.2	The Melancholic Subject — 54
3.3	Poetic Form and Materialities — 61
III	Spatial Archives: Mourning and Melancholia — 72
1	Lost Spaces and Spaces of Loss: Wordsworth, Clare and Lord Byron — 72
2	The Archive and the Motif of Journey — 90
2.1	Samuel Taylor Coleridge, “The Rime of the Ancient Mariner” — 91
2.2	Lord Byron, Childe Harold’s Pilgrimage — 102
3	Archiving the Infinite: Sublime Spaces in William Wordsworth’s “Nutting” and Samuel Taylor Coleridge’s “Kubla Khan” — 110
IV	The Subject as Archive — 126
1	Conceiving the Thing : William Wordsworth’s “Lucy Gray” and the Lucy-Poems — 126
2	Archiving Melancholia: John Keats’s Odes — 138
V	The Poem as Archive: Aesthetics, Genre and Writing — 168
1	Re-Writing the Male Archive — 168
1.1	Anna Laetitia Barbauld, “Inscription for an Ice-House” — 170
1.2	Charlotte Smith, “Beachy Head” (1807) — 177
2	Genre and Archive Fever — 194
2.1	Percy Bysshe Shelley’s “Ozymandias” and the Sonnet — 195
2.2	The Fragment: Coleridge’s “Christabel” — 202
3	Writing, Print and the Archive: William Blake and Percy Bysshe Shelley — 221

X — Contents

VI Afterword: Romantic Archive Fever and Beyond — 240

VII Works Cited — 249

Primary Sources — 249

Secondary Sources — 253

Index — 270