

Contents

Acknowledgmentsvii

Chapter One: Introduction: Popular Culture and Disney Pedagogies.....1

Julie C. Garlen and Jennifer A. Sandlin

Part One: Teaching Gender

Chapter Two: Awakening Rebellion in the Classroom: Analyzing and Performing Disney 27

Alejandra Martinez

Chapter Three: The Disney Princess Dilemma: Constructing, Composing, and Combatting Gendered Narratives 39

Joyce Olewski Inman and Kelli M. Sellers

Chapter Four: An Encouraging Evolution Among the Disney Princesses?
A Critical Feminist Analysis 51

Cole Reilly

Part Two: Teaching Race

Chapter Five: Disney's (Post?)-Racial Gaze: Film, Pedagogy, and the Construction of Racial Identities 67

Jessica Baker Kee and Alphonso Walter Grant

Chapter Six: “I don’t think Disney has anything to do with it”: Unsettling
Race in a White English Classroom..... 81
Christina Berchini

Chapter Seven: Disney and the Ethnic Other: A Semiotic Analysis of American Identity 95
Manisha Sharma

Part Three: Teaching Consumers

Chapter Eight: Teaching Disney Critically in the Age of Perpetual Consumption 111
William M. Reynolds

Chapter Nine: “How many do you have?” Disney English (as a) Language
(of) American Acquisition 123
Laura Rychly and Stacie K. Pettit

Chapter Ten: Images of Teachers: Disney Channel Sitcoms and Teachers as Spectacle 137
Dennis Attick

Chapter Eleven: Gaia Taking Back Disneyland: Regenerative Education for Creative Rewilding 149
Marna Hauk

Part Four: Teaching Ourselves

Chapter Twelve: “But He Was Your Prince Charming!”: Accounting for the End of “Ever After” with a Divorce Fairytale 163
Shannon Dahmes Puechner

Chapter Thirteen: Dis(ney)ability: Reconceptualizing Normalcy
Through an Embodied Arts Research Curriculum 175
Laura Traff-Prats and Gina Polencheck Ruchalski

Chapter Fourteen: Online Fan Activism and the Disruption of Disney’s Problematic Body Pedagogies 193
Sara Leo

Chapter Fifteen: Learning to Live as a Disney Villain. 207
Jessica L. Kirker

About the Contributors..... 219

Index..... 223