

| | |
|----|--|
| 10 | Preface or: a look back into the future |
|----|--|

| | |
|----|--|
| 14 | All in flow: the early days of J. Müller in Brake J. Müller 1821–1862 Generation I: Johann Müller (1797–1869) |
| 14 | Trading and forwarding: the founder, Johann Müller |
| 23 | Competition in the Weser estuary: the establishment of Bremerhaven |
| 23 | Flying the flag: Brake gains free-port status |
| 24 | With the Robinson Line from Brake: horned cattle exports to England |
| 25 | The German fleet Brommy in Brake |
| 26 | To the “New World”: emigration from the Weser region |
| 27 | Masts and funnels: from sails to steamships |

| | |
|----|---|
| 30 | Fire up the boilers: Brake’s railway connection J. Müller 1862–1888 Generation II: Bernhard Müller (1834–1882), Carl Theodor Müller (1837–1882) |
| 30 | Mastering crises: structural adjustment |
| 32 | Full speed ahead: Müller’s railway agenda |
| 33 | The innovative concept: products from England |
| 34 | Hazardous cargo: petroleum in Brake and Nordenham |
| 37 | Coal, coke and ham: Bismarck’s protectionist policies |
| 38 | Bottles for Porto: Oldenburg-Portugiesische Dampfschiffs-Rhederei |
| 39 | Meanwhile: Anna Müller and Chief Clerk Wilhelm Clemens |

42 Flexibility in times of crisis:
Weser correction, World War I and inflation
J. Müller 1888–1932
Generation III: Johannes Theodor Müller
(1864–1932)

42 “Investing in bricks and mortar ...”:
piers and packhouses

44 A profound idea:
the Weser correction

45 Innovation by the river:
the new quay right by the Weser

49 Creating capacities:
the grain facility in Brake

50 The quay site:
new office building

51 Slump at the port:
in World War I

52 Economic decline:
revolution and inflation

54 Differences that run deep:
Weser depth and seaport tariffs

56 From the “Roaring Twenties”
to “Black Friday”

60 Times of hardship and times of fortune:
for Brake and for business
J. Müller 1932–1972
Generation IV: Hans Müller (1897–1979)

60 Sole representation:
Hans Müller

64 Granary in Brake:
Karl Gross – J. Müller Transshipment Terminal

65 Swastika flags on the town hall:
Brake under National Socialism

66 Adaptation:
competencies and capacities

67 A common cause:
Bremen-Brake Grain Agreement

68 Working at full capacity:
in World War II

70 What does the future hold?
Weser Ports Authority

71 Supplies via Brake:
the first grain steamer

73 Full steam ahead:
Hans Müller’s return

| | | | |
|----|--|-----|---|
| 75 | Ship ahoy: Braker Schifffahrts-Gesellschaft | 90 | Three brothers: one family business |
| 76 | Capacity – a question of survival: Lower Saxony Port Authority, Brake | 93 | Advice and control: J. Müller’s Advisory Board |
| 77 | Taking responsibility: en route to the economic miracle | 93 | The port in transition: from bulk goods to breakbulk operations |
| 79 | Expansion of crane operations: bulk coal and ores | 94 | Acting flexibly: a change of course in crane operations |
| 81 | A common seaport policy: Unterweser Transport Agreement | 96 | Technological leap at the South Quay and WIMA Terminal |
| 82 | Unloading by quota: Bremen-Brake-Nordenham Grain Agreement | 101 | Distributed as agreed: Unterweser Grain Agreement |
| 83 | Close by: J. Müller, Oldenburg | 102 | Ready for the “Turnaround”: port infrastructure and hinterland connections |
| 83 | Forwarding of grain and forestry products: J. Müller, Bremen (I) | 103 | Setting a course for the port of Brake: Niedersachsen Ports |
| | | 104 | Fishmeal transshipment: cooperation with Köster in Bremen (II) |
| 90 | On track for growth Expansion – Diversification – Modernisation J. Müller 1972–1990 Generation V: Gerhard Müller (1928–2020), Klaus Müller (1930–2014) and Ernst Müller (1938–2013) | 112 | J. MÜLLER 1990 – today Generations V and VI: family and non-family members |

| | | |
|-----|---|--------------------------|
| 112 | Strategic realignment: a modern management structure with family and non-family members | |
| 116 | Handing over the baton, from partner to partner and a new corporate structure | |
| 117 | Company and family: continuity based on tradition | 152 |
| 118 | A family (run) company: training and working at J. Müller | 152 153 154 |
| 123 | Consolidation and growth in Brake: core competencies in agriculture and breakbulk | 156 158 159 |
| 125 | Wheat, barley, tapioca, maize, soya and other animal feeds: growth of the Agri Terminal | 160 160 160 160 |
| 131 | Continuously promoting progress: growth of the Breakbulk Terminal | 161 161 |
| 137 | For a good reason: Niedersachsenkai | 162 |
| 139 | Coffee and fishmeal: J. Müller, Bremen (III) | 170 174 176 |

Appendix

| |
|--|
| Board of Directors |
| Management |
| Supervisory Board |
| The partners |
| Goods handling at Brake seaport, 1900–1930 |
| Transshipment figures for Brake seaport 1951–2020 |
| Discharge volume trends in the Unterweser Grain Agreement, 1935–2020 |
| Complete statistics JMW Bremen 2008 to 2020 |
| J. Müller – consolidated balance sheet figures |
| Storage capacities at the Brake site |
| Storage capacities at the Bremen site |
| J. Müller Group Management and Boards |
| J. Müller Group Advisory and Supervisory Boards |
| Notes |
| Sources and references |
| Picture credits |
| Legal Notice |