

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
Foreword	xiii
Steven J. Taylor
Introduction	1
Scot Danforth and Susan L. Gabel
Part 1: How Can Disability Studies in Education Contribute to the Understanding of the Politics of Difference?
Chapter One: Deconstructing Difference: Doing Disability Studies in Multicultural Educational Contexts	17
Nirmala Erevelles
Chapter Two: Conversations Across Disability and Difference: Teacher Education Seeking Inclusion	31
Julie Allan
Chapter Three: I'm "Coming Out" as Disabled, but I'm "Staying in" to Rest: Reflecting on Elected and Imposed Segregation	45
Santiago Solis

Chapter Four: Politics of Wonder: Contemplation of the Diversity and Humanity Within Disability59
Holly Pearson

Part 2: How Can Disability Studies Inform Our Understanding of Contemporary Political Debates in Education, Particularly in Their Relevance to Disabled Students?

Chapter Five: The Natural Hierarchy Undone: Disability Studies’
Contributions to Contemporary Debates in Education.....79
Deborah J. Gallagher

Chapter Six: Learning from Our Historical Evasions:
Disability Studies and Schooling in a Liberal Democracy.....91
Scot Danforth

Part 3: How Is Disability Studies in Education (Ir)relevant to the Practical Interests, Experiences, and Goals of Disabled People in Schools?

Chapter Seven: Disability Studies and Young Children: Finding Relevance105
Chris Kliewer

Chapter Eight: Tensions Experienced as a Visually Impaired
African American Student Negotiated Identities in the Pursuit of Education: A Mother’s Influence117
Denise P. Reid

Part 4: How Can Disability Studies in Education Be Relevant to the Practical Concerns of Teachers?

Chapter Nine: Disability Studies in Education as a Tool for Transformation of the Self and Teaching.....143
Emily A. Nusbaum, Brianna Dickens, and Mariami Reamy

Chapter Ten: Disability Studies in Education and the Practical Concerns of Teachers.....157
Alicia A. Broderick, D. Kim Reid, and Jan Weatherly Valle

Part 5: In What Ways Is Disability Studies
(Ir)relevant to Local, State, and National Policy?

Chapter Eleven: Misconceptions and Misunderstandings:
Twin Fallacies That Influence Disability Policies.....183
Ron Ferguson

Chapter Twelve: Applying Disability Theory in Educational Policy:
NIDRR’s “New Paradigm of Disability” as a Cautionary Tale197
Susan L. Gabel

Part 6: How Does Disability Studies in Education Contribute to Conversations About the Relationships
Between School, Family, and Community?

Chapter Thirteen: Developing Inclusive Practice Through Connections
Between Home, Community, and School219
Claire Tregaskis

Chapter Fourteen: Finding the “Proper Attitude”:
The Potential of Disability Studies to Reframe Family/School Linkages.....231
Philip M. Ferguson and Dianne L. Ferguson

Part 7: How Can Disability Studies Inform the Development and Use of Advanced Educational Technologies?

Chapter Fifteen: Interrogating the Impact of Scientific and Technological Development on Disabled Children in India and Beyond....249
Gregor Wolbring and Anita Ghai

Chapter Sixteen: The Question Concerning Technology and Disability—
And the Future of Education.....269
Gerard Goggin

Part 8: Why Teach Disability Studies in Education?

Chapter Seventeen: A Look at the Way We Look at Disability287
Linda Ware

Chapter Eighteen: Teaching to Trouble303
Beth A. Ferri

Part 9: How Is Disability Studies in Education Taking Shape in Nations of the Global South and East?
Chapter Nineteen: “I Want to Be ‘Normal’”: (Re)learning the Value of DSE-Informed Research in the Global South321
Srikala Naraian
Chapter Twenty: The Post-2015 Challenge: Social Exclusion-Capability-Identity, a New Impetus for Shaping Education for Vulnerable Children in Low-Income Contexts335
Parul Bakhshi
Contributors.....355
Index.....357	