

Table of Contents

List of Illustrations	x
Musical Examples	xii
Tables	xiv
Charts.....	xiv
Manuscript Sigla Used in Tables, Charts and Examples	xv

Chapter I: The Relationship between Byzantine and Latin Neumes (Introduction to the Problem)

1. Previous theories..... 1
Hypotheses on the origin of the neumes – The theories of Lambillotte, Riemann and Fleischer – Thibaut's thesis – The position of Peter Wagner – The views of the school of Solesmes – The standpoint of Jammers – Problems of the material
2. Methodology
- 6 Fundamentals – Criticism of Thibaut's "preuves" – Opinions on the Greek names of Latin neumes – Introduction to the new methodology: Prerequisites for the onomatological, semiographical and semasiological investigations

Chapter II: Classification of the Latin Neumes

1. The modern systematic typologies
- 11 Dom Pothier – Dom Dechevrens – Dom Mocquereau – P. Wagner – Dom Sūnol – Dom Ferretti – Dom Huglo – E. Jammers
2. Classification of the Medieval theorists
- 14 The individual classes of neumes – The relationship of the Latin classification to the Byzantine
3. The new classification..... 16
4. Latin sources
- 18

Chapter III: The Neumae Simples and the Tonoι Haploι

1. Virga and Oxcia
- 26
2. Clivis and Bareia..... 31

3. Punctum and Kentema, ‘Virga jacens’ or ‘Traculus’ and Oligon or straight Ison	31
4. Apostropha and Apostrophos.....	39
Chapter IV: The Neumae Compositae and the Tonoι Synthetoi.....	43
1. Combinations involving doublings or triplings	43
2. Ligatures	50
Chapter V: Byzantine Parallels to the Latin Ornamental Neumes	66
1. Introduction.....	66
2. Quilisma (Tremula), Tromikon and Antrichisma.....	71
3. Oriscus and Hyporrhoe.....	86
4. Pes quassus and Seisma I.....	111
5. Salicus and Choreuma.....	117
6. Gutturalis.....	144
Chapter VI: The Notae Semivocales and the Hemiphona.....	157
1. Introduction.....	157
2. Hemivocales (‘Epiphonus’) and Hemiphonon, Semitonus, Hemitonion, Franculus and Klasma.....	158
3. Byzantine Parallels to the Cephalicus.....	165
4. Conclusions.....	166
Chapter VII: The Litterae Significativae and the Byzantine Grammata..	169
1. Introduction.....	169
2. Previous Hypotheses about the origins.....	170
3. Relationship between the Litterae and the Grammata.....	173
4. The equivalent designations of the tone levels	175
5. Previous Interpretations of the rhythmic litterae suprascriptae in relationship to theories about Gregorian rhythm	187
6. The equivalent rhythmic letter abbreviations	191
7. Other abbreviations.....	199
8. Origin, development and evolution of the litterae significativae	202
Chapter VIII: The Names of the Latin Neumes	214
1. Problems.....	214
2. Typology of the nomina notarum	215
3. Borrowed Middle Greek and original Latin nomina	219

4. The Hellenized and especially Ancient Greek nomina.....	220
5. The relationship of the tabulae neumarum and the contributions of the interpolators.....	223
6. The age of the nomenclature.....	237
Chapter IX: Latin Neumes and Ekphonic Notation	240
1. The derivation of the Latin root neumes.....	240
2. The doubling and tripling of fundamental neumes as a common feature of Ekphonic, Paleo-Byzantine, Latin and Armenian neumes	241
3. Conclusions.....	243
Chapter X: The Origin of Latin Chant Notation.....	245
1. Introduction.....	245
2. The presumed differences between Byzantine and Latin neumatic notation	246
3. The relationship of Early Byzantine neumes to the Latin ‘accent’ and ‘point’ neumes	250
4. The Byzantine Origin of the nota romana	251
5. The actual differences between Latin and Paleo-Byzantine neumatic notation	257
6. The age of the nota romana.....	260
7. Other conclusions.....	262
Chapter XI: The Byzantine Origin of the Latin Dodekaechos	274
Chapter XII: Notker’s Ellinici Fratres	284
Chapter XIII: St. Gall: Centre for the cultivation of an artistically nuanced ornamented chant tradition	290
Identical and corresponding latin, byzantine and slavic neumes, figures and formulas	293
“History of the Reception of the Universale Neumenkunde, 1970 – 2010” by Neil Moran	371
“Forty Years After Constantin Floros’ Universale Neumenkunde. Some New Insights” by Luca Ricossa	379
Selected Bibliography	387
Index	396