

Contents

Introduction

The Genesis and History of Modern Phenomenological History and Historiography. An Overview — 1

- 1 What is Phenomenology, and its Derivative Phenomenological History and Historiography? — 1
- 2 Metahistory: the Phenomenological Method Applied to Generational and Societal Patterns of Thought in the Arts and the Sciences — 4
- 3 What is the Difference Between a Phenomenological “Metahistory” and Phenomenological History and Historiography that Focuses Primarily Upon the Individual? — 9
- 4 Post-World War II and Contemporary Phenomenological History and Historiography — 14
- 5 The Future of Phenomenological History and Historiography — 16

Part I: Pre-Modern History of the Phenomenological Method of Discernment—Visual and Grammatical

Chapter 1

Aristotle’s Visual and Verbal Phenomenology — 19

Chapter 2

Aquinas and Dante: the Early Renaissance and its Furtherance of Verbal Phenomenology — 27

Thomas Aquinas — 27

Dante Alighieri (1265–1321) — 31

Chapter 3

Giotto and the Furtherance of Visual Phenomenology — 36

Part II: Early Modern History through the Enlightenment and the Development of Visual and Verbal Phenomenological Discernment

Chapter 4

Thomas Hobbes, Wilhelm Leibniz, and Johann Martin Chladenius and the Multiple Objectivities of Historical Thought — 49

Thomas Hobbes (1588–1679) — 50

Gottfried Wilhelm Leibniz (1646–1716) — 57

Johann Martin Chladenius (1710–1759) — 62

Chapter 5

Johann Heinrich Lambert and Visual Phenomenological Understanding — 64

Chapter 6

Immanuel Kant Augmenting the Phenomenological Inheritance of Verbal and Visual Understanding — 69

Chapter 7

Friedrich Hegel and Karl Marx — 76

Part III: Late Nineteenth and Early Twentieth Century Verbal and Visual Phenomenological Discernment

Chapter 8

Franz Brentano and the Advent of Modern Phenomenology — 83

Chapter 9

Edmund Husserl and Modern Phenomenology — 87

Chapter 10

Wilhelm Dilthey and Generational Metahistory: Towards a Phenomenological Model — 95

Chapter 11

Sigmund Freud and Carl Gustav Jung: The Phenomenology of the Spoken Word — 100

Chapter 12

Heinrich Wölfflin and a Metahistorical Phenomenological Approach to Visual History — 105

Chapter 13

Wassily Kandinsky and the Non-Euclidean Geometry of the Visual Image:
A Phenomenological Understanding — 112

Point — 114

Part IV: Mid-Twentieth into the Twenty-First Century: Further
Foundations towards a Thorough Phenomenological
History and Historiography

Chapter 14

Andrew Paul Ushenko and Stephen C. Pepper: the Further Development of Verbal and Visual Phenomenology — 121

Chapter 15

Hayden White's Phenomenological Metahistorical and Metahistoriographical Writings — 136

The Theory of Tropes — 138

Chapter 16

David Carr's Essays on Phenomenological History and Historiography — 142

Chapter 17

Mark E. Blum's Augmentations of Phenomenological Thought — 154

Chapter 18

Kurt Lewin, Towards a Phenomenology of Interpersonal Activity and Mutual Understanding — 172

Part V: Thorough Phenomenological Metahistory and Meta-Historiography in the Future: What is Needed

Chapter 19

Grounding Metahistory and Meta-Historiography within a Phenomenologically-Based Interpersonal and Interdependent
Comprehension — 181

Conclusion — 190

Bibliography — 193

Index — 199