

Table of Contents

1.	Introduction	11
1.1	Scope	11
1.2	Purpose and methodology	12
1.3	Narrative outline	14

Part I: Reckoning with Karl Barth

2.	Barth's Analogically Mediated Epistemology	23
2.1	The analogical truth of revelation.....	23
2.2	The compatibility of the incarnation with the divinity of Christ ...	25
2.3	Revelation and election: Christ as the disclosure of ontological self-determination.....	27
2.4	The reliability of election: the reformulation of supralapsarianism.....	30
2.5	The reliability of election: Jesus Christ as its subject and object	33
3.	The McCormack-Hunsinger Debate	35
3.1	The metaphysical priority of being or act: the logical ordering of the Trinity and election.....	35
3.2	Bruce McCormack.....	36
3.2.1	Jesus as the subject and object of election: McCormack's radically actualist Barth	36
3.2.2	Jesus as the subject and product of election: a contradiction in terms?.....	40
3.2.3	The incarnation and notions of ontological significance	41
3.2.4	Is Jesus ever the subject of election?	43
3.2.5	The devaluation of election as a real decision	44
3.3	George Hunsinger	46
3.3.1	Trinity and election in the Church Dogmatics	46
3.3.2	Barth's use of ontology	47
3.3.3	Analogia temporalis and the reliability of revelation	48
3.3.4	Jesus Christ as the subject of election: the role of the Logos asarkos in Barth's theology	50
3.3.5	The return of the Deus absconditus	53

3.4	Critical evaluation as interpretations of the Church Dogmatics	54
3.4.1	Bruce McCormack	54
3.4.2	George Hunsinger	55
4.	Barth's Metaphysics I: God as a Being-in-Act	59
4.1	The metaphysical indissolubility of being and act	59
4.2	Essential reality and self-determination: a unity-in-distinction	62
4.3	The divine being as reiterative and the reformulation of constancy as 'faithfulness'	67
5.	Barth's Metaphysics II: Divine Freedom	69
5.1	Divine freedom in the act of revelation	69
5.2	Counterfactual freedom and the content of revelation	71
5.3	Divine freedom in creation and salvation.....	74
5.4	The positive meaning of freedom as "self-determination"	75
5.5	God as "the one who loves in freedom"	77
6.	Barth's Metaphysics III: Doctrine of Eternity.....	81
6.1	The incarnation as the basis for the doctrine of eternity	81
6.2	God's time for us: revelation and the time of Jesus Christ	82
6.3	The nature of eternity: stare and fluere	84
6.4	The nature of eternity: pre-temporal, supra-temporal and post-temporal	87
6.5	The trinitarian structure of eternity.....	89
7.	Critical Evaluation of Barth's Solution.....	93
7.1	Balancing epistemological reliability with divine freedom	93
7.2	Ancillary eternity: the detachment of the incarnation from election	94
7.3	Problems with Barth's analogia temporalis	96
7.4	Reiterative self-affirmation: between Hegelianism and Modalism ..	97
7.5	Eternal succession and the spectre of the Deus absconditus	99

Part II: Building on Karl Barth

8.	Robert Jenson	103
8.1	Moving beyond Barth	103
8.2	Identification of God with the resurrection	105
8.3	God as event: narratological metaphysics.....	107
8.4	Divine freedom as futurity	109

8.5	Perichoresis and the unity of time in God	111
8.6	God as future	113
8.7	The pre-existence of the Son.....	115
8.8	Tension resulting from the being-act categories	117
8.9	The reduction of divine freedom.....	119
8.10	Problems arising from Jenson's doctrine of eternity	120
8.11	Critical evaluation: the return to analogia temporalis	122
9.	The Classical Doctrine of Eternity and God as Actus Purus	125
9.1	Justification and outline.....	125
9.2	The logic of eternity	128
9.3	God as actus purus : Thomas Aquinas' argument for God as prime mover	131
9.4	Aquinas' dependence on Aristotle: the meaning of δύναμις.....	132
9.5	The meaning of ἐνέργεια: the case for "activity"	135
9.6	The meaning of ἐνέργεια: the case for "activity" and "actuality" ...	136
9.7	The analogy between cases of being-in-ἐνέργεια and being-in-δύναμις.....	139
9.8	Differences between Aristotelian and Thomist metaphysics	141
9.9	The implications of God as actus purus : God as inherently active	142
9.10	Divine activity as triune generation.....	144
9.11	The implications of God as actus purus : the incarnation as an eternal occurrence	145
9.12	The possibility of eternal causation.....	147
9.13	The simultaneity of time in eternity.....	149
9.14	Eternal incarnation	153
9.15	From being-in-act to actus purus : no other Logos but Christ	154
10.	The Classical Doctrine of Eternity and the Analogia Temporalis	157
10.1	"Time" as a divine name	157
10.2	Eternity as "life": point-like and extensional models	158
10.3	Eternal duration	160
10.4	Eternal movement	163
10.5	Eternal movement as triune perichoresis	167
10.6	Eternity and the mechanics of the analogia temporalis	169
10.7	Triune generation as the eternal basis for Godforsakenness, suffering and sin	171
10.8	The analogia temporalis as a via media	174
10.9	The response of the Son and Holy Spirit: "consent" as reciprocal kenosis	176

10.10	Divine freedom in the analogia temporalis : between freedom and caprice.....	179
10.11	Responding to critiques of von Balthasar	181
10.12	Analogia temporalis in Barth and von Balthasar	186
11.	Conclusion	189
11.1	Barth redux	189
11.2	Reframing classical eternity	192
11.3	Reclaiming classical eternity	193
11.4	Moving forwards	196
	Index of Subjects	197
	Bibliography	199