

Table of Contents

Introduction

The First Treatise of the First Section of the First Collection, which is on the Science of Logic 1

Chapter One

Indicating what the Book is Concerned with 3

Chapter Two

On Instruction about the Sciences and Logic 9

Chapter Three

On the Utility of Logic 18

Chapter Four

On the Subject of Logic 24

Chapter Five

On Instruction about the Simple and Compound Expression 29

Chapter Six

On the Investigation of what Men Say about the Essential and the Accidental 42

Chapter Seven

On the Investigation of what People Say about (what is)
Significative of the Quiddity 48

Chapter Eight

Of the Division of the Universal Simple Expression into its Five Divisions 54

Chapter Nine

On the Genus 62

Chapter Ten

On the Species and the Mode of the Divisions of the Universal Relative to it 72

Chapter Eleven

On the Investigation of the Descriptions of the Species 79

Chapter Twelve
On the Natural and the Intellectual and the Logical.
And what is Prior to the Many and in the Many and
Posterior to the Many in these Five Senses	87
Chapter Thirteen
On the Differentia	97
Chapter Fourteen
The Difference of the Property and the Common
Accident	112
The Second Treatise of the First Section of the First Collection, which is on the Science of Logic	119
Chapter One
On the Shared [Features] and Differences between these Five [Predicables], and the First of them, after the Commonality between the Genus and the Differentia	121
Chapter Two
On the Shared [Features] and Difference between the
Genus and the Species	132
Chapter Three
On the Remaining Shared [Features] and Differences	139
Chapter Four
On the Relationship of Some of these Five
[Predicables] with Others	148
Index	153