

Contents

List of Abbreviations	vii
Preface	xi
Introduction	1
Systematic unity is that which first makes ordinary cognition into science	2
The connection between a priori foundation and empirical cases of application is a pervasive problem for Kant's critical philosophy	6
Kant's Transition Project in practical philosophy	9
Origins of the gap between a priori morality and embodied agency	14
Moral reflection	19
Moral schemata	25
1 What Philosophical Problem Does the Transition Project of the Opus postumum Address?	31
Introduction	31
Kant's philosophia naturalis	32
The systematic function of the "General Remark to Dynamics"	51
Alternative accounts of the Transition Project	65
The schematism of the Transition Project	85
The "Octaventwurf" and the "Early Fascicles" of the Opus postumum : The categorical structure of the mediating concepts of the Transition	92
Conclusion	106
2 Why is a Transition Project in Practical Philosophy Required?	113
Introduction	113
Mundus Intelligibilis and Mundus Sensibilis	116
A priori foundation and empirical open-endedness of ethics	125
Casuistry and ethical conflict	146
Kant's alleged rigorism	167
Conclusion	177

3	Kant's "Aesthetics of Morals"	181
	Introduction	181
	The four mediating concepts in the "Aesthetics of Morals"	187
	Implications	206
	The unfinished Metaphysics of Morals and the Opus postumum	217
	Conclusion	234
	Conclusion	237
	Bibliography	243
	Index	255