

Contents

1	Introduction	1
2	Being Physically Active during University Teaching Pays Off	3
2.1	Findings from a Health Perspective	3
2.2	Findings from the Perspective of Work, Cognition and Learning Research	6
3	Change Sedentary Behavior—Theoretical Considerations	9
4	Heidelberg Model of Physically Active Teaching	13
4.1	Basic Idea	13
4.2	Components of a Physically Active University Teaching	16
5	Practical Examples	21
5.1	Physically Activating Teaching Methods: “Podcast Walk”	21
5.2	Curriculum-based Physical Activity: Module “physically-activating school and teaching design”	22
5.3	Active Design: “Stand-up Lab” and “Seminar Meadow”	23
5.4	Activating Lecturer Training: Live-Online-Training “essentials of physically activating university teaching”	25
5.5	Physical Activity Breaks: “Student motion sensors” and “activity break stickers”	26
6	Thoughts on Implementation	29
7	Conclusion	33
	References	37