

Contents

1	Challenging a Static Conception of Heimat	1
1.1	The German Idea of Heimat	4
1.2	A Multifaceted Concept	11
1.3	Disciplinary Orientation and Objective of this Study	13
2	Heimat: Theoretical Framework(s)	17
2.1	Heimat : a Spatial Concept	17
2.1.1	Heimat : an Emotional Geography	19
2.1.2	Heimat : a Practice of Self-Location	24
2.2	Heimat in a Globalized World	28
2.2.1	Heimat in the Field of Tension between Stability and Change	29
2.2.2	A Plurilocal Sense of Heimat in the Context of International Migration and Translocal Practices	33
2.3	Operational Definition of Heimat	43
3	Methodological Approach	45
4	Insights from Migrant Biographies on the Concept of Heimat	53
4.1	Initial Factors that Orient Individuals in their Sense of Heimat	54
4.2	Influence of Initial Migration Experiences on Familiarization and Embeddedness	62
4.3	Processes and Experiences of Heimat -Making	72
4.3.1	Strategies to Embed into a New Environment	73
4.3.2	Trans- and Plurilocal Practices	78
4.4	(Re)negotiations of the Individual Sense of Heimat	82

4.4.1	Being in the In-Between	82
4.4.2	Heimat as an Aspired Ideal Condition	87
5	Heimat: An Emotional Map of Biographical References	89
5.1	Reflections of Migrant Biographies in the Individual Sense of Heimat	89
5.2	Towards a Simultaneously Static and Dynamic Conception of Heimat	96
6	Conclusions on Heimat in the Context of International Migration	99
	References	103