23 FOREWORD

26 Acknowledgements

29 INTRODUCTION

30 Public space design, a critically underexamined activity

Restoring the focus on materiality

Backtracking to design

Taking a critical look

36 The public space, object per se?

Formal and material autonomy

Semantic autonomy

41 GENESIS

42 Prelude (1980–1990): the laboratories

The Barcelona model

The Lyon model

47 Turn of the century: the emergence of a field of design

Mid-nineties: generalization of the subject

Concerns and vectors for change

59 PORTRAITS

A method for critical analysis of the project's genesis
Three investigations

65 ANIMATE

68 Place Simon-Goulart | Geneva | 2003–2013

A homogeneous island | Partitioning the space for distinct functions | Materiality at the service of spatial organization | Urban storytelling as a project tool | Communal places, between banality and community

80 Place de la République | Paris | 2009–2013

A large pedestrian esplanade | A difference dictated by uses | Hesitations between modulation and unity | A surface, simultaneously special and commonplace | Abstraction and simplification of the area | Ambiguity of layout

95 Creating the commons

101 ORNAMENT

104 Place du Molard | Geneva | 2002–2004

Uncertain limits | A need to find a logic specific to the site | History revisited by a universal symbol | Background-figure ambivalence

116 Superkilen | Copenhagen | 2007–2012

Give the place an identity by a radical treatment of the surfacing | A superlative project | Ambivalence toward the context | The design of the red square as an example | A pictorial treatment of the public space

129 Pictorial figures

135    CONSTRUCT

138    MFO-Park | Zurich | 1998–2002

Competition conditions at the origin of an extraordinary concept | A void, designed as a solid | A predominantly constructive rationality | An oneiric project narrative | Autonomous or contextualized object?

150    Theaterplein | Antwerp | 2004–2008

Intellectual justification for the composition of the space | An air cube as a theater extension | Roof span reinforced by the ground treatment | Abstraction and monumentality: symbols of a “social infrastructure”

163    Characterized volumes

169    MODEL

172    Paseo Marítimo de la Playa de Poniente | Benidorm | 2002–2009

A conceptual gesture | A sculptural form of extreme complexity | From geometric complexity to site rationality | Equivocal role of the natural referential field | A distinctive ground covering | The need to make a difference

186    Måløv Aksen – the Stationsplads | Måløv | 2008–2010

Wide-scale site assessment | The melting ice theme extended the Stationsplads: shaping a space for walking and exploration | A geometric and architectonic landscape | A theme as a local anchor? | A fragmented network of heterogeneous spaces

199    Sculpting to entertain

205 NATURE

208 Platz der Menschenrechte | Riem, Munich | 2005
An urban square at the beginning | A pine wood | Sensitive, poetic imaginary | Toward a formal singularization of the square | A hybrid character

220 Bymilen | Copenhagen | 2007–2010
A dense and surprising forest on sloping ground | Elements
embedded in a unifying surface | An environment to be explored differently | A sensory aesthetic | Two natural
imaginaries of differing value | Formal singularization
of the public space

233 Shards of nature

239 CROSS-EXAMINATION

241 An ambiguous relationship with the material context
245 Salutory designs: beyond the beautification project
247 A redefinition of the notion of context
250 Public spaces, purveyors of experiences
253 Singularize and universalize at the same time
