

Contents

David Vondráček
Introduction: Of Foreign Lands and Peoples	7
Moritz Kelber
(De-)Constructing the Enemy in Early Modern Music and Dance	15
Minari Bochmann
German Music in the Japanese Press during the Nazi Era	33
Nikola Komatović
Octatonic Ambiguities	51
Emma Kavanagh
‘Du paradis rêvé’: The Orient in the Male Imagination in Saint-Saëns’s La Princesse Jaune	59
Sebastian Bolz
Love Thy Enemy as Thyself? Poetics of the ‘Other’ in Rudolf von Gottschall’s Rose vom Kaukasus and Alexander Zemlinsky’s Sarema	71
Lenka Křupková
The ‘Other’ in Czech Music – Between Attraction and Aversion	93
Miloš Zapletal
Early Janáček as Seen by German Critics	109
Hartmut Schick
Folklorism, Symmetry and Tritone: Béla Bartók’s Piano Quintet from 1904 as a Key Work for the Composer’s Development	127
Dániel Nagy
The Cults of Composers and Their Influence on Music Analysis	147
Bojana Radovanović
Contemporary Musicology in a Neither/Nor State. Challenging the Status of Music(ologic)al Periphery	167

Miloš Bralović
Negating the West, Going East. On Socialist Realism
in Yugoslavia (1945–1950) 181

Ana Djordjević
Music in War Films of the Yugoslav and Post-Yugoslav Period:
Case Studies of Battle of Neretva and Before the Rain 193

Olga Stojanović Fréchette
Popular Music in Intercultural Language Teaching 205

Claire McGinn
‘Vanilla and Chilli’ in Lithuanian Minimalism. Tropes of Liminality in Discourse around the ‘Machinist’ Generation 213

Authors 230

Index 234