

New and diversified European competitions: 1970 - 1987163

1. European Championships reach maturity and the boom in women's athletics	165
Helsinki 1971	165
Rome 1974	167
Prague 1978	168
Athens 1982	170
Stuttgart 1986	172
2. European Indoor and Junior competitions become established	176
European Indoor Championships	176
European Junior Championships: German Democratic Republic puts on a show	179
3. European Cups: European Cup 'Bruno Zauli' as a model	185
European Cup 'Bruno Zauli': crushing East German domination	185
European Marathon Cup	192
European Cup of Combined Events	193
Conclusion: new constraints linked to globalisation	198

European Competitions in the new Europe: 1987 - 2010201

1. European Championships : showcase of EAA activities	203
Split 1990	203
Helsinki 1994	206
Budapest 1998	209
Munich 2002	212
Gothenburg 2006	215
Barcelona 2010	218
2. European Cups: moving towards change	223
Revival of the European Cup 'Bruno Zauli'	224
1989: Great Britain and GDR domination before geopolitical upheavals	225
1991: the USSR for the last time in history	226
1993: Russia for the first time in history	227
1994: Germany on both fronts	228
1995: Germany, despite 18 metres in the triple jump for Edwards	228
1996: first SPAR European Cup for Germany	229
1997 - 2000: exceptional domination of the Russian women's team and British victories in the men's events	230
2001 - 2002: the Polish surprise and subsequent victory of Germany	233
2003 - 2008: Russian women's team every time - Germany and France for the men	236
2009 and onwards: birth of the European Team Championships	239
European Cup of Combined Events	241
European Cup Race Walking: from Russia to Spain	242
European Cup Marathon: Italy by far	243
European Cup 10000m: Portugal overtakes Spain	244
European Cup Winter Throwing	246
European Athletics Indoor Cup: on hold	247